The Piffle Pact.
Which Is the Best Hobby?
A Bigger Solar System.
Sweden's Butter Idea.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THE PEOPLE and government of the United States should meditate on Hiram Johnson's interesting statement that there will not be any war between China and Japan "because chopsticks cannot fight against machine guns."

Chop-sticks represent China, huge in numbers, and unprepared. The machine guns represent Japan, trained to the minute.

Who doubts that in a war between Japan and China, Japan's 60,000,000 would easily defeat China's 400,000,000?

JAPAN WOULD be victorious, BECAUSE JAPAN IS READY FOR THE FIGHT, relies on preparation, not on foolish peace sentiment, or what Hiram Johnson calls "the Kellogg piffle pact."

Persia was bigger, richer, but that made no difference.

This country is bigger, richer, and if anything more self-satisfied than Persia. That would make no difference if any European or Asiatic country should send against us as many fighting airships as Alexander had men.

A SOLEMN editorial writer says:

"A man who has a hobby can never tire of life. He always has something of passionate interest."

The late Lord Northcliffe used to say:

"Never neglect your hobby."

His real hobby was the belief that he was like Napoleon.

Why not make life itself your hobby? Is life not sufficiently interesting, sufficiently short, sufficiently exciting, to supply a good hobby, without collecting postage stamps, strange coins, or, like one of the very Rothschilds, collecting all different kinds of fleas, from the Arctic to the tropics?

Rothschild, at least, made a collection useful to science. Many hobbies represent waste only of concentration.

Contemplation of life and the universe, from the ants with their organized society at your feet, to the distant nebulae, and from divine goodness to the strange, murderous and swindling inclinations of the human race, supplies everybody with "something of passionate interest."

SCIENCE SAYS man's conception of his solar system has been limited and mistaken, like the opinion of the Chinese concerning their "middle kingdom." They called it the middle kingdom because they thought it was the center of everything and about the only important thing. They learn from Japan and Russia now, as they learned long ago from Genghis Khan and others, that China is not so important.

ASTRONOMERS say that the "middle kingdom" of our solar system with which we are acquainted is comparatively unimportant.

Far out in space, never seen by us, there are probably a dozen giant planets that would make not only our tiny earth but even great Jupiter seem small, and they also belong to our solar system.

This is news. It might upset the "explanation of the planets" accepted by Jeans, Eddington and other wise ones.

They say that far in the past some giant sun passed near us and by its power of gravitation pulled an enormous piece out of our sun.

That enormous piece broke up into small pieces, which now revolve around the sun as planets, the small pieces in turn throwing off satellites, like our moon.

THAT THEORY may go to join Descarte's "vortex" theory, and other theories designed to "explain" the universe without the necessity of a creative mind, which has always seemed unsatisfactory to many.

It is rather like "explaining" a large mother pig with little pigs around her, by saying that in ages past some large pig, passing, tore a large piece from the mother pig, the big piece gradually breaking up into the little pigs.

SWEDEN PROPOSES an interesting experiment. Ships with the latest types of refrigerator plants will bring Swedish butter here and take back American fruits. Every package of butter will contain the printed statement:

"Sweden cannot import fruits if its ships cannot take Swedish goods to the United States and sell them there."

This appeal for fair tariff play unfortunately will not reach our "best minds," that control the tariff, for those minds do not unwrap packages of butter. That is done in the kitchen.

MAHATMA GANDHI will visit the King and Queen of England with a shawl around his shoulders and a loin cloth for costume, legs bare.

But the king and queen and those about them will not laugh or feel inclined to laugh.

Sincerity is a great power; Gandhi possesses it and has 300,000,000 human beings back of him.

If "light refreshment" is offered it must be selected carefully. Gandhi will not eat eggs, because they contain "life."

He likes peaches, grapes, baked apple, which also contain

G. O. P. Chiefs Split Over Lawrence

COYNE FOES FIGHTING ALLY

By MARK SHIELDS

Out of the tangled alliances of the county campaign it developed today that the Republican organization, despite the actions of lieutenants of Mayor Charles H. Kline, is not a unit behind the candidacies for County Commissioners of Senator William D. Mansfield, Republican, and David L. Lawrence, Democrat. Politicians friendly to the Mayor, but opposed to Senator James J. Coyne, chief Lawrence spokesman among the Republicans, are cooling toward a bipartisan alliance, fearful of increasing the power of Coyne.

This development, together with definite evidence that in uncontrolled districts there is a swing away from usual support of the "regular" Republican ticket and toward Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, Republican and Independent, and former Senator C. M. Barr, Independent, appeared as a partial clarification of the confusion of the primary campaign. In strong Republican districts, where the so-called church vote is effective, the McGovern-Barr ticket was actively promoted yesterday.

ALLIANCE HAMPERED

Striking of 11,500 names from the voters' roll, and a threat of indictment hanging over scores of election officials normally active on behalf of machine politics, is expected to hamper the Mansfield-Lawrence alliance perfected by Coyne and some lieutenants of County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong. The presence of state police, sent by Gov. Pinchot at the instance of Independent headquarters, will impede the activities of the machine in districts where intimidation of voters has been common in past elections.

MARY MARGARET MARSHALL

MARSHALL GIRL, FRIEND HURT

Mary Margaret Marshall, 17, of 201 Lytton avenue, daughter of the late Rody P. Marshall, Pittsburgh attorney, and Ruth Curley, 16, of 5815 Ferree street, were in Pittsburgh Hospital today, the result of a Sunday auto collision.

The car in which the girls were riding collided with another in Frankstown road, near Rodi, Penn Township, about 7:30 p. m.

Miss Marshall's right forearm was fractured and her legs were bruised severely. Miss Curley's upper front teeth were broken off.

Lion Tamer Fails as Husband, Divorced

PERU, Ind., Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Clyde Beatty, 27, an animal trainer for a circus, has been able to get along pretty well with 32 lions and tigers, but apparently not so well with his wife. The former Miss Ernestine Pegg, of Peru, sued him for divorce two years ago, but subsequently dropped the suit. This fall she sued again. Now the decree has been granted.

Beatty once was attacked by a tiger in Kokomo, Ind., but was saved by a huge lion.

Credit Board Head Sees Trade Upturn

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—(INS.)—Old man business, sick from a disease called depression, is breaking out with a rash of prosperity and, having had his fever broken, is well on the road to recovery. So declared George M. Reynolds, chairman of the board of the National Credit Corporation today. He added:

"The American business man and public generally is loosening up in spending."

NAN TO TESTIFY, PUBLIC BARRED BY COURT

Judge Rules 'Answer' Libels Girl, Whose Book Linked Child to Warren Harding

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 2.—Judge John M. Killits, presiding at the trial of Nan Britton's suit for $50,000 damages against C. A. Klunk, of Marion, O., charging libel, today barred all newspapermen and spectators from the courtroom.

Judge Killits stated that "in the interests of public morals," he had decided to continue the trial in secret, and ordered everyone except those attending in an official capacity, ejected from the courtroom.

Miss Britton's attorneys had announced she would testify herself regarding clandestine meetings with the late President Warren G. Harding who, she alleges, was the father of her daughter, now 12.

BOOK LIBELOUS

While issuing the order making the trial secret, Judge Killits also announced that the book entitled, "The Answer to the President's Daughter" caused libelous statements against Miss Britton, author of "The President's Daughter," in which she made the allegation regarding the late President.

A statement in the "Answer" volume that Miss Britton was guilty of criminal libel was incorrect, Judge Killits added. Pointing out that President Harding died in 1923 and that Miss Britton's book was published four years later, Judge Killits said:

"One can't libel a dead person and the plaintiff cannot be called to prove anything because the defendant had admitted it."

In Ohio and most other states, Judge Killits said, it is safe for anyone to say anything about a dead person, no matter how atrocious it may be. Then he pointed out that Mrs. Harding is dead also.

Judge Killits said the mysterious deposition of a New York hotel submitted as evidence by Miss Britton's attorney will be preserved in the records of the case for use only in the event of an appeal. He has impounded the deposition and ordered that its nature or contents are not to be revealed to the jurors nor to the public during the present trial.

Judge Killits, who has been on the federal bench here for many years, is a powerful figure in Republican politics here. One of his most famous cases was the trial several years ago of Dr. Frederick Cook, Arctic explorer, who was convicted of using the mails to defraud and was sentenced by Judge Killits to a term in Leavenworth prison. Dr. Cook had been involved in fraudulent Texas oil promotions.

PINCHOT SEEKS EXTRA TAX TO AID JOBLESS

Governor Lists Proposals For Special Session; Cigarets, Gas Face Duty

HARRISBURG, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot's unemployment relief program, including extra taxation, budgetary revision and a state bond issue, today was in the hands of the members of the General Assembly, who will convene here next Monday night at 9 o'clock in extraordinary session.

His proposals in his proclamation calling the Legislature into extra session included 15 separate subjects. Under the state constitution, the Legislature cannot enact any legislation not mentioned in the proclamation.

The Governor will present his program in detail in his address to the Legislature next Monday night and it was believed that he might even present at this time bills covering his proposals.

His plan would permit municipalities to borrow money for unemployment relief purposes, one-half of which later would be repaid by the state after a constitutional amendment has been approved by the electorate in 1933. Distribution of relief funds would be controlled by a state commission of unemployment relief which would also be empowered to solicit funds from individual citizens of the commonwealth.

EMERGENCY GAS TAX

He also proposed that an emergency gasoline tax of two cents per gallon be imposed, as well as a tax levy on cigarets and outdoor advertising.

The proposed constitutional amendment would permit the state to borrow money to reimburse the municipalities for one-half of their loans and to repay with interest the money solicited from individuals. This state loan would be repaid through the issuance and sale of bonds after the constitutional amendment has been passed by two Legislatures and ratified by the electorate in the 1933 general election.

The present budget of the commonwealth would be revised to permit the undertaking of additional building projects to provide

HOOVER, BEST TALK ON LOANS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—(INS.)—A delegation representing the United States Building and Loan League, headed by W. E. Best, Pittsburgh, its president, had a lengthy conference with President Hoover today over possible efforts of stimulating home financing. Afterwards it was announced the executive would have a statement to make on the subject, probably tomorrow.

Although Best did not reveal the nature of the plan his organization submitted, it is understood the delegations proposed that existing building and loan associations be made the basis for whatever financing scheme Mr. Hoover may have in mind.

The President also was told in New York state land banks have been rediscounting loan association paper, and it was understood it was suggested that this be done on a national basis.

Best said his association was opposed to the proposal of the National Association of Real Estate Boards to set up a $2,000,000 central finance corporation which would absorb frozen real estate papers now being held by banks. In the building and loans associations, he said, the nation already has an adequate lending organization with plenty of money available. He said:

"The big thing the home owners have to have is the kind of a mortgage that does not come due. The loan associations are able to carry a man through such periods of adversity as the present provided he pays his interest."

BLAST HURLS SCORE FROM BEDS IN STOWE

Threats Against Family Over Election Activity Told; Store and Home Damaged

Political terrorism was blamed for the second bombing in the McKees Rocks district within three months, early today, when a blast rocked a grocery-dwelling at 103 Highland avenue, Stowe Township, injuring two girls and hurling a score from their beds.

The bomb, charged with dynamite and filled with railroad spikes, was set off beside the foundation of the store of Louis DeCicco, who, with his family, occupied the building above and in the rear.

G. O. P. CHAIRMAN

Josephine DeCicco, 21, a daughter, who was injured slightly in the blast, is Republican chairlady of the First District, Stowe Township, and her uncle, James Ventmiller, is chairman. Miss DeCicco said before the primaries a man drove up to her father's store and made this announcement:

"I am a big shot and if you don't change your politics it will be too bad for you."

Several days ago the same man, according to Miss DeCicco, told her friends:

"If some people I know don't change they will be in a cemetery in a couple of days."

The DeCiccos supported the Independent county and local ticket.

Ventmiller charged that the bombing was intended to frighten people from the polls tomorrow. He predicted it would add many votes to the Independent ticket.

County detectives are working on the theory that the same persons were responsible who bombed the home of Thomas J. Conley, Independent candidate for Justice of the Peace in McKees Rocks several months ago.

HURLED FROM BEDS

De Cicco, his wife, Angeline, 37; Josephine, Rose, 20; James, 17, and Frank, 12, were hurled from their beds by the explosion. The two girls, asleep in the front part of the building, were slightly injured. The building was partially demolished.

The blast rattled windows and shook buildings in Avalon and Bellevue, across the Ohio River.

MISS ANGELA LOLLER TAKING AN APPLICATION FROM HARRY PARSON, ONE OF THE FIRST

Pinchot Approves Parole For Kelly, Store Killer

Gov. Pinchot today approved commutation of sentence for Gilbert W. Kelly, serving 10 to 20 years in Western Penitentiary in the slaying of James H. Neal, Boggs and Buhl p. vroll messenger, June 10, 1921.

Kelly was found guilty of second-degree murder. Mrs. Washington Kelly, of Swissvale, mother of the man, twice refused, made a third appeal to the Board of Pardons in September for commutation of her son's sentence, stating that he, her only child, was needed for her support. The board recommended the commutation. Under the law, Kelly would have been eligible for parole next June.

At the penitentiary it was said Kelly's application for parole probably would be acted upon at a meeting of the prison board Friday, with the parole effective from a date early in December.

Kelly was one of four captured after Neal was shot down in front of the North Side store. The leader of the gang, Benjamin Stokes, never was apprehended.

The parole, when approved by the prison trustees, will be effective during the remainder of his minimum sentence.

Los Angeles Water Line Twice Blasted

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Two large sections of the Los Angeles aqueduct, the city's principal channel of water supply, were destroyed today, presumably by dynamite, on the Jawbone canyon siphon in a renewed outbreak of the bitter controversy between the city of Los Angeles and Owens Valley ranchers over the water rights in the valley.

Hundreds Seek First Jobs Let by Welfare Group

Hundreds of unemployed milled around the temporary headquarters of the Allegheny County Emergency Association at 516 Grant street today as applications were being received for the first 100 men to be put to work during the winter.

More than 1,000 men were assigned to work today at $24 weekly. A second 1,000 will be employed in alternate weekly shifts until March. As the association's program is amplified with projects in co-operation with surrounding boroughs, officials anticipate a payroll of 4,000 will be maintained on part time basis.

Of the first workers assigned to jobs today, more than 900 of them went to the various division headquarters of the city and Highways and Sewers Department, where they were sent out in crews of 20 and 30. They will grade dirt streets. Other smaller groups were assigned to clean Panther Hollow Lake, planting shrubbery along the Mt. Washington hillside and removing dirt from playgrounds.

CIVIC LEADERS GIVE SUPPORT TO 6-HOUR DAY, 5-DAY WEEK

HOOVER SCORED FOR 'DODGING' JOB ISSUE

Gifford Committee Putting 30 Million on 'Degrading Dole,' Say Sociologists

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Supporters of the six-hour day plan as an immediate aid in fighting present unemployment and a guarantee against future periods of depression, today were augmented by the newly organized "joint committee on unemployment." The committee recommended:

"One way to meet the present unemployment problem is to reduce the hours of labor with a shorter work week with no reduction in the total weekly wage. We believe that at the present time emergency laws should be passed limiting the hours of labor to six hours a day and to five days a week."

HOOVER PLAN SCORED

Only through the appropriation of a large sum by the government for unemployment relief, raised "through increasing surtaxes on large incomes and estate and gift taxes can new employment be encouraged and industrial expansion assured," the committee declared.

The Hoover administration was condemned for misleading the public regarding the seriousness of the problem and dereliction in facing and grappling with the situation. The committee pointed out:

"Yet rather than call together the representatives of the American people for action in meeting the present emergency, "the administration has appointed the Gifford committee to urge collecting funds and doling them out to a pauperized citizenry. . . . At this moment the administration's officially appointed committee is brazenly contemplating the placing of nearly 30,000,000 persons on the most degrading dole."

Shorter Work Day Needed, Says Green

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(Universal.)—The creation of work opportunities for the unemployed by reduction of working days and working hours was urged in a nation-wide broadcast last night by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Green and Owen D. Young were the chief speakers of the program, arranged in behalf of the President's committee on unemployment relief.

Asserting that unemployment is the most vital problem before the country, Green said:

"The number of days worked per week and the number of hours worked per day can be reduced to a point where millions more workingmen and women can be employed."

RAIL WORKERS STUDY RELIEF

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—(INS.)—representing more than a million and a half railway workers, heads of the 21 major railroad brotherhoods gathered in annual convention here today, prepared to face the twin specters of unemployment and reduced wages.

The wage reduction problem was emphasized by the action of the New York Central Railroad in asking its employes to accept a 10 per cent reduction in pay. Prior to this move officials of the brotherhoods had been wary of voicing any sentiment with regard to threatened wage cuts.

The unemployment problem was given first place on the agenda of the session, and officials hoped some plan to provide relief for the rail workers not now employed would be determined.

RALPH CAPONE LOSES APPEAL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—(INS.)—The Supreme Court today ordered prison doors closed on Ralph J. Capone, brother of Scarface Al Capone, of Chicago, when it denied his petition for review of his conviction for falsifying his income tax report.

Capone is under sentence of three years in federal prison and $10,000 fine. He now is at liberay on bail.

In its indictment of Capone the government charged him with making false statements in a letter to the commissioner of internal revenue offering to compromise his tax liability for the years 1922 to 1925 inclusive. He admitted owing $4,082 and offered to compromise for $1,000.

Scarface Al now is reported considering an appeal to the Supreme Court to obtain his release on bail after he was sentenced to 11 years' imprisonment and fined $50,000 by Federal Judge Wilkerson after being found guilty of income tax evasion.

WILLARD URGES EARNINGS POOL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Modification of the transportation act to permit railroads to turn all excess earnings during good times into a deserve to be used in slack periods was recommended today by Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio.

Appearing before a Senate manufactures sub-committee, Willard said the railroads should be able to play a big part in stabilising industry, but could do it more effectively if the law were changed to allow creation of the pool.

Willard said that in his opinion the greatest problem facing American industry and statesmanship today was to provide for the man without a job. He said it was a permanent problem growing out of improved methods of production.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 2.—Open warfare developed today between Maricopa County officials and attorneys for Mrs. Ruth Judd, confessed slayer of Agnes Leroi and Hedwig Samuelson, who were killed here and their bodies sent in two trunks and a suitcase to Los Angeles.

Sheriff J. R. McFadden was halted in his attempt to extract from Mrs. Judd the unexplained mysterious details of the double murder, by the sudden employment of local counsel.

STORY UNSHAKEN

After spending two long sessions with Mrs. Judd, the sheriff declared:

"I have not been able to cause Mrs. Judd to change any part of her shocking story of how she shot to death her two inseparable companions for whom she expressed a deep infatuated devotion."

Whether the new attorneys would move to prevent McFadden from having Mrs. Judd re-enact the slayings in the murder apartment today was not announced. It was thought unlikely Mrs. Judd would attend the inquest tomorrow over the bodies of Miss Leroi and Miss Samuelson.

MISSING WITNESS FOUND

Lucille Moore, state's star witness, missing from Phoenix for more than a week, was found residing in Williams, Ariz. Her whereabouts had been known by officials.

Miss Moore, a nurse, had told a story that Mrs. Judd became furiously jealous when she saw her companion, J. J. Halloran, wealthy lumberman, Chamber of Commerce official and leader of the community chest, in an embrace with Miss Leroi and Miss Samuelson.

Miss Moore also told of the visits of three married "Phoenix playboys" and men from other cities to the apartment the women had occupied.

RELIEF GAS TAX TOTAL SHOWN

The proposed plan to place an emergency tax of two cents a gallon on gasoline, part of Gov. Pinchot's unemployment program for the special session of the Legislature, will cost motorists of the state approximately $35,463,400 during the two-year period covered by the plan, the statistical bureau of the Pittsburgh Motor Club reported today.

This figure was based on gasoline sales in Pennsylvania during 1930 when 886,585,000 gallons were sold. Revenue amounting to $33,000,000 was paid by motor vehicle operators on this fuel last year. The present gasoline tax rate is 3 cents per gallon. It was reduced from four cents on July 1 last year by an act of the Legislature.

If Gov. Pinchot's plan is adopted motorists will pay approximately $44,329,000 in gasoline taxes in this state next year, the Motor Club reported.

work for the unemployed and the Pymatuning Dam appropriation would be amended to permit use of any unencumbered balance in the $1,500,000 appropriation for work incident to the completion of the dam.

ROAD IMPROVEMENTS

Local authorities would be permitted to postpone tax sales in time of economic depression and unemployment. The highway department, with the approval of the Governor, would be authorized to construct, reconstruct or resurface public roads, streets and highways which are now maintained at the expense of municipalities and other political subdivisions.

The state treasurer would be authorized to transfer money from the general fund to the motor license fund to carry on this work, the money being repaid to the general fund from collections from the emergency gasoline tax.

The Senate will act on all appointments made by Gov. Pinchot since the close of the Legislature on May 28. Except those of justices of the peace and Judge Joseph Stadtfeld, Pittsburgh, to the Superior Court.

2 GIRLS HURT IN BOMBING

Windows in houses in the neighborhood were shattered.

The others, shaken from their beds, who lived in adjoining houses, were Pasquale Totero, his wife, Josephine, and their children, Louis, 19; Mary, 16; James, 14; Rose, 12, and Margaret, 9, of 105 Highland avenue; James Ventmeilli; his wife, Mary, and son Anthony, 21, at 107 Highland avenue, and Mrs. Madelyn Mauro, and her children, Catherine, George and Patsy and Joseph Mauro and his wife, Grace, and 6-months-old son, Michael, residing across the street. Windows in the Mauro house were shattered.

The damage was estimated at $1,500.

GIRLS' ROOM WRECKED

Describing her experience, Josephine De Cicco said:

"My sister Rose and I were on the floor when the explosion awakened us. At first I thought it was lightning; then I knew it was too late in the season for lightning. My next thought was a bomb. Why, I don't know. The mirror on my dressing table was knocked across the floor."

Stowe Township police, investigating the blast, revealed that 200 sticks of dynamite had been reported stolen from a road construction job in Middletown road, Kennedy Township. Police said some of the dynamite may have been used in the bomb.

Reports that three men were seen running from the scene of the blast a short time before the explosion were unverified.

Fred Moore, 1014 Warrington avenue, today turned over to Detectives Michael Tortorelli and John Dashbaugh, of the bomb and arson squad, a timer, believed to have been made to set off a bomb. The timer was found lying on the ground near Moore's house. Detectives searched the vicinity, but reported they were unable to find any bomb.

International News Service.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A Riga dispatch to the Central News today said that the Japanese ambassador in Moscow had delivered a second "protest" to the Soviet foreign office against the movement of Red army troops on the Manchurian border.

Tokio dispatches to the Daily Mail said the Japanese military authorities in Manchuria were threatening a northward advance into Hei-Lungkiang province, although "aware that it might involve a clash with Russian troops, massed opposite Manchouli in the west and at Blagoveschensk in the northeast."

A Tokio message also quoted a Port Arthur dispatch to the effect that a "secret Sino-Russian agreement" had been reached under which President Chiang Kai-Shek had received certain promises from the Soviet.

MUKDEN, Nov. 2.—(INS.)—More than 1,000 Mongolian soldiers, some wearing Russian uniforms, have swept into Manchuria and are concentrating near Hailar on the Chinese Eastern Railway, according to information reaching Japanese military headquarters here today.

War Minister Jiro Minami, discussing the Manchurian situation with the cabinet at Tokio, said that his reports indicated that the Soviet had supplied both arms and ammunition to Chinese in the North, at the same time bargaining with the Chinese for a free hand for military operations against "White Russians" in the Hulunpuir and Hailar area of Manchuria.

G. O. P. TO BACK PINCHOT PLAN

WASHINGTON, Pa., Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Edward W. Martin, Republican state chairman, said today following issuance of Gov. Pinchot's proclamation for the special legislative session to take up unemployment problems that "this is a period when all elements must co-operate—it is no time to play politics." He said:

"I hope it will be a short session, so that the expenditures may be kept to a minimum. With things to be done, we should get at it.

"The Republican organization can always be depended upon to support any measures which will advance the interests of Pennsylvania. The President of the United States has called on all the people to assist in the present emergency, and I feel that Pennsylvania will assume its full share of the burden."

THE FORTUNE of great Columbia College, over which Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler presides in New York, amounts to more than $140,000,000, not including building and equipment values.

The college will spend more than $17,000,000 this year. Such a sum of money, spent on education, should do a great deal of good, especially if young men and women could be taught to think for themselves, in addition to absorbing facts already thought out by others.

ONE AT LEAST of our industries is prosperous. Under its new law in six months Reno, Nev., distributed 3,000 divorces, which is not a bad imitation of mass production in a young industry.

Reno lawyers got at least $500,000 out of the 3,000 divorces, to say nothing of fees paid to legal home-talent by the Reno proceedings.

If you have what people want and advertise it, you can always make money.

Akron Salutes President On First Capital Trip

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—The giant U. S. Akron made its bow to President Hoover today on its first trip to the nation's capital as part of a cruise above eastern seaboard cities.

Gliding majestically over the historic points dotting the capital streets, lined with hundreds of of- ers, the Navy's biggest ... its air fleet dipped re- ... as it passed over the ...use.

The Navy's new lighter-than-air ship was accompanied by the smaller Los Angeles.

While the Akron circled over Washington her radio receivers picked up a message of welcome broadcast by Assistant Secretary Jahncke, of the Navy, on behalf of Mrs. Hoover. The Secretary said:

"Good morning, Admiral Moffett, Commander Rosendahl and gentlemen.

"It is my privileged honor to tell you that the fair sponsor of the Akron, the first lady of the land, Mrs. Hoover, is now viewing the maiden voyage of the Akron from the roof of the White House. She sends greetings and best wishes that all voyages of the good ship may be successful."

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—The Navy airship Akron arrived over Philadelphia at 12:25 p. m., followed two minutes later by the Los Angeles. The two great ships circled the city in the cloudless sky.

Fearless Woman Taxicab Driver Slain; Seek Mate

RIVERSIDE, Cal., Nov. 2.—(AP.)—For 10 years Mrs. Alice Papanti, regarded here as a woman of mystery, drove her taxicab during all hours of the day and night throughout the orange grove country. She had said she feared no man and was able to care for herself.

In one of the orange groves that border the Riverside-Colton road her body was found yesterday. It bore a bullet wound and evidence of a beating. She had been bound and gagged.

Although deputy sheriffs said they had no evidence against the man, they announced they were searching for Otto Hardky, the woman's husband, who was paroled two years ago from San Quentin Prison after serving seven years for attempted blackmail.

Mrs. Papanti lived alone here. She assumed her maiden name after her husband's conviction. Officers believe she never obtained a divorce. She led a secluded life and apparently had no close friends.

It was said Mrs. Papanti was the last member of Lorenzo Papanti family of Colonna, Italy, and his son, Augustus L. Papanti, dancing teacher and social leader in Boston in the late Nineteenth Century. There was no indication, however, that the slain woman was the daughter of Augustus Papanti.

MAYOR LEADS THOUSANDS IN GREETING SCHUMANN-HEINK

DIVA EMBRACES WAR VETS AT STATION

By J. FRED LISSFELT

A reception such as is accorded political princes welcomed Mme. Schumann-Heink last night at Pennsylvania Station. The great diva is in Pittsburgh to sngi "Katisha" in "Mikado," and they say she needs only to wink and the house is in an uproar.

Long before the arrival of the Philadelphia train, Mayor Kline, delegates of German societies and the American Legion waited in the train shed. In the concourse thousands of interested and curious admirers were ready to cheer at the sight of the army mother.

GREETED BY MAYOR

The train pulled in 10 minutes late. Shiny new patent leather traveling cases with the company's names made a barricade for the reception committee. Then smiling Schumann-Heink appeared. Someone of the crowd gave a lusty "Hoch!" and she felt at home. Mayor Kline took her hand, and paid her the tribute of all her friends, expressing the gratitude of his fellow-citizens for her achievements in art, as a mother, and as a patriot. All she could say was:

"Too much! Too much!"

John Dimling, representing German societies, reminded her of her singing days with the Frohsinn Society, but I suspect, from the twinkle in her eyes, that she preferred to remember his good kraut and dumplings, maybe a glass of beer with them, maybe two.

ALL 'HER BOYS'

"Ach! Mein soldier boys . . ."

"Madame, this is Mr. Deller, county commander of the legion."

"What I care . . . commander? . . . he is my boy, not so? . . . am I the mother of all the soldier boys or no?" . . .

"Come on I give you a kiss . . . ha Mr. Mayor, I have to have more respect or I give you one too . . . ha" . . .

And then the photographers were ready and she stepped upon a stool, cocking her new velvet hat a la Eugenie.

"I should have a new wig for pictures . . . be sure to tell my manager that . . . he can afford it. . . ."

"Now, Mr. Mayor, look into my eyes . . . we must have a ittle fun too . . . What noch eins . . . another picture, five cents, please!"

Then the procession, with Schumann-Heink leaning on Mayor Kline's arm, and followed by committees, came into the concourse, where immediately the German singing societies gave the hymn "Es ist Der Tag des Herrn!" a song Germans prefer to sing on their most solemn festivals. Schumann-Heink stood transfixed. There were tears in her eyes and all she could say:

"Ach, how beautiful!"

A band struck up a rousing march. It sounded like the good days of Armistice times, and everyone followed the parade to the automobiles. In a few minutes Schumann-Heink was safe in her hotel, and the crowd was gayer for having seen the smile of this queen of song.

PARIS THRONGS CHEER LAVAL ON RETURN

PARIS, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Premier Pierre Laval got one of the greatest receptions of his career this afternoon as he returned from his flying trip to Washington.

The crowd which filled the railway station and blocked the streets outside was larger than it ordinarily might have been because this is the All Souls holiday, and as the Premier stepped from his train the crowd raised a cheer which seemed to surprise the returning statesman.

GREETED BY HOWELL

His daughter, Mlle. Josee, was bewildered by the magnitude of the reception, and although the gendarmes kept the enthusiastic greeters back, the Premier had to use his shoulders and elbows to push his way into the waiting room, hauling Josee after him, his hand closed about her wrist.

Andre Tardieu, the minister of agriculture; Gen. Gouraud, the military governor of Paris, and Williamson J. Howell, American charge d'affaires, were among the officials waiting at the station.

The Premier and his daughter came up by train from Havre, where the Ile de Franec landed them this morning.

JOSEE LAUDS AMERICANS

The Premier went to his office immediately and immersed himself in business after announcing that he would report to President Doumer later in the day.

His daughter chatted for a moment with those who had come to greet them at the station. She said:

"Being in New York was like living in a modern novel. For me this trip always will be a great and beautiful memory. The Americans have an extreme sense of hospitality and the midshipmen at the Annapolis Naval Academy feted me in charming fashion."

GIRL CONFESSES SHARE IN WIFE MURDER

Domestic Says She Drugged Victim, Whose Husband Then Slew Her With Razor

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Supplanting three earlier statements, Clara Fish, buxom 19-year-old domestic, signed a fourth confession early today in which she said Walter Maddux, 35, slashed his wife, 32, to death with a razor in a lonely woods Thursday after she had lured Mrs. Maddux there and rendered her unconscious with ether. Maddux declared Miss Fish "lied" in implicating him.

The statement was the first in which Miss Fish had implicated Maddux. He was arrested and taken to jail at Kirkwood, in St. Louis County. Maddux previously had been questioned, but released.

In her last confession, which police said she made voluntarily, the girl, who roomed at the Maddux home since coming to St. Louis six months ago from Southeast Missouri, said that two months ago Maddux told her he wished to "get rid" of his wife and asked her to aid in killing her.

Thursday, she said, she and Maddux planned the story they would tell to clear themselves in the contemplated death of the woman. She said she had earlier purchased a can of ether and a razor and turned them over to Maddux.

Miss Fish related that Thursday afternoon she lured Mrs. Maddux to the woods on the outskirts of Kirkwood, where the body was found Friday, and rendered her unconscious with the ether. When the woman became unconscious, she said, she departed.

Early that night, she said, Maddux left home, returning two hours later. The next morning, she said, Maddux told her, he had gone to the woods and slashed his wife's throat with the razor.

Noted Writers Debate State Child Rearing

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—State rearing of children was decried by Sherwood Anderson, novelist and editor, last night in a debate with Bertrand Russell, English mathematician and philosopher.

Russell argued for state-regulated homes for children on the assertion that parents who love their children often do them more harm that persons who are indifferent.

He asserted children require physical care and freedom rather than affection. Maternal solicitude, he said, is designed by nature to be adequate for a family of 10 and becomes excessive when concentrated upon one or two, the usual number of children in a family.

Anderson argued that state child rearing would result in "standardization of children" and that "the home, no matter how bad it may be, is better than that." He added:

"I cannot persuade myself that if all children were placed in state institutions the teachers would not develop faults fully as bad as those to be found in mothers today."

Long Skirt Styles Revive Slow Dances

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Teachers of the fifth district of the Dancing Masters of America were told by Miss Myrtle Doris Pettingale, of Cleveland, that the lengthened skirt and new feminized silhouette have put into the discard the quick time jerky types of dancing, revising the slow tango. Speaking yesterday she said the Havana tango and waltz and other types of Spanish dancing superseded all others in the ballroom.

GIRL TRAPPED VON PAPEN, WAR SPY

Book Just Published Tells How Flirtation Brought German Agent's Exposure

By C. A. SMITH
International News Service.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—How a lunch-hour flirtation in which Capt. Von. Papen, military attache of the German embassy in Washington, indulged with a typist led to disclosure of the German espionage system in the United States and Von Papen's expulsion from the country is related in a book published here today.

The girl in the case, it is explained by Hector C. Bywater and H. C. Ferraby, co-authors of "Strange Intelligence," was in reality an English spy who had succeeded in obtaining employment as a stenographer in the German headquarters in New York.

SECRET DOCUMENTS

She learned that a large shipment of secret documents, including reports of plotting in America by the German intelligence staff, was about to be shipped here from New York. Her problem was to mark the packing case containing these proofs of espionage so they could be seized on their arrival in England.

On the day the packing case was to be shipped out of New York she demurely decided that she would prefer to eat her lunch in the office. The book then relates:

"She actually squatted on the precious box itself while she ate her meal.

"Von Papen practiced a little flirtation with the typist. Soon they were sitting side by side on the precious case.

MARKED WITH HEARTS

"The lady was coy. Absentmindedly, she took a red pencil and quietly, without thinking, drew two large red hearts side by side on the woodwork of the case.

"The gallant captain took the pencil from her and himself drew the arrow to transfix the hearts.

"All that the searchers had to do when the steamer called at the British port for examination was to look for a wooden case marked in red with two large hearts."

ESCAPES JAIL ON DAY SET FOR DOOM

Reprieved Killer and Robber Suspect Kidnap Garage Man; Steal Car in Flight

International News Service.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Nov. 2.—Wilfred Flood, convicted murderer, scheduled to die in the electric chair today until the Pardon Board granted him a commutation a week ago, and Raymond Schutt, acquitted of murder recently, escaped today from the Luzerne County Jail by sawing through the bars of their cell.

Flood, it was learned at Harrisburg, is gambling with all the odds in his favor, win or lose, in his flight. A checkup revealed that the formal commutation order, reducing Flood's sentence to a life term in East Penitentiary, already bears the signature of Gov. Gifford Pinchot and that the death warrant for the fleeing man has been returned from Rockview Penitentiary.

ESCAPES DOOM

State officials here pointed out that the original death sentence imposed on Flood, and later upheld by the Supreme Court, can not now be carried out in the event of his capture.

Should Flood be captured, he faces precisely the same sentence he awaited while held in the Luzerne County prisonlife imprisonment.

Flood was convicted of first degree murder for the killing of Joseph Pollard, youthful gasoline station attendant, during an attempted holdup. Schutt was acquitted in connection with the murder of Al Jannetti during a holdup here about 18 months ago, for which three of his pals received life sentences. He was being held to answer a robbery charge.

After the two escaped from their cell, they scaled a 10-foot retaining wall and went to garage nearby, where they abducted Arthur Loucks, night attendant.

WILD RIDE IN HILLS

The men appeared at the garage shortly before dawn, Loucks said. Both were armed and forced him, at gun point, to turn over to them a high-powered touring car, owned by Henry Gibbons.

Then, Loucks said, they shoved him into the machien and forced him to drive to Schutt's former home in South Wilkes-Barre, where the fugitives histily filled a traveling bag with clothing and also procured a rifle.

After leaving the Schutt residence Loucks told police the men drove away at high speed through the Pocono Mountains, holding him prisoner during the wild ride. Loucks was put out of the machine at Bear Creek, about 10 miles from Wilkes-Barre, and hitch-hiked back to this city.

'MASQUERADER' KILLS FRANK KIN

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 2.—Search was being conducted here today for the slayer of Sigmund L. Baar, of Brooklyn, N. Y., son-in-law of Jacob H. Frank, president of the Frank & Seder store, Pittsburgh. Baar was killed late Saturday night by a costumed bandit as he walked across the lawn of a friend's home. Mrs. Baar witnessed the shooting.

Baar and several friends were playing bridge at the home of a friend when an automobile carrying additional guests entered the driveway.

Mrs. Baar and a Mr. and Mrs. Cohen alighted from the car. A bandit wearing a Halloween costume confronted Mrs. Cohen, and two unmasked bandits, apparently Negroes, held Cohen.

Baar appeared on the scene, and believing the bandits to be masqueraders, said:

"What's this all about?"

The costumed bandit turned and shot Baar, who collapsed. The bandits fled.

5 Shot as Hunting Season Opens in State; Weather Aids Sportsmen

Numerous hunting accidents, one of them in Pittsburgh, were reported today soon after the opening of the small game season, which called an army of hunters into the fields of Western Pennsylvania.

While on his way to the West Liberty School this morning, Neil Thompson, 10, of 845 Timberland avenue, was struck on the head by a spent bullet from a hunter's gun. He was taken home and treated by a physician.

Other victims were Anthony Tignetti, 16, of Armstrong County; Charles Miller, 30, of Dunbar, Fayette County; Harold Altmire, 18, Butler County, and Jones E. Kurtz, 16, of Donegal, Westmoreland County.

SHOT BY COMPANION

Kurtz was shot accidentally by a companion while hunting pheasants near his home. Physicians removed 25 buckshot from his body.

Tignetti was accidentally shot in the left hand a few miles from his home near Apollo. He is in the Allegheny Valley Hospital, Tarentum.

Altmire, 18, is in Butler Memorial Hospital. He started from his home, near Butler, at daybreak and two hours later was accidentally shot in the neck and both arms.

Miller was wounded in the abdomen and right leg, and is in the Connellsville State Hospital.

He was accidentally shot on his own property. He became angered, it is said, when his hunting dog is reported to have grasped a pet rabbit. Miller, it is asserted, threw the gun at the dog and it discharged.

FAIR WEATHER

Generally fair and crisp weather was reported throughout most of the state today as the hunters took the field. The number was expected to equal and probably exceed last year. A greater kill was expected because many men are working on reduced time and can devote more attention to hunting.

Most of Allegheny County's hunter's, more than 35,000, entered the field last night or at dawn. The Perry highway to the north was the favorite trail of many local nimrods, bound for the northern part of the state.

Sleuth Traps Indian Slayer Of Co-Ed After Months

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—The Justice Department announced today a confession has been obtained from Golney Seymour, young Apache Indian, that he killed Miss Henrietta Schmerler on the White River Indian Reservation in Arizona last July.

Bureau of Investigation agents reported Seymour confessed he attacked and then killed the young Columbia University research worker, whose body, clad in Indian dress, was found in a ditch.

He is being held on the reservation and will be tried in a federal court.

J. A. Street, a special agent of the bureau, spent the summer in disguise among the Apaches to work on the case. In addition to obtaining a full confession from Seymour, Street was described as having also got from Robert Gatewood a statement that he witnessed the murder. Gatewood is in jail at White River as a government witness.

Street returned from the Indian country with his solution of the crime just as department officials were beginning to worry over his long absence. They had not heard from him for several weeks.

Miss Schmerler was killed while she was living on the reservation studying tribal customs of the Apaches in connection with her work at Columbia.

She donned Indian costume and attended several of the tribal dances with young Indians, although warned that she might be subjecting herself to danger if she became too inquisitive and ventured too much alone with the Indians.

RACE FOR LIFE OF BABY FAILS

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—A 30-hour race from Orlando, Fla., to Philadelphia—all the speed of a fast train and an airplane—police cars clearing the way for ambulances in two cities—skill of surgeons with the most modern of medical instruments, were of no avail in saving the life of a 3-year-old girl.

Margery Cohen was rushed here yesterday by her father, J. B. Cohen, of Orlando, to remove a bean from her bronchial tube. All the way she lay gasping in her father's arms.

The father and his dying baby speeded by train to Washington; police motorcycles escorted an ambulance from the station to the airport; a plane cut train time from Washingon to Camden in half; motorcycles again cleared the way to a Philadelphia hospital.

Surgeons removed the bean after almost two hours. Pneumonia, however, had already developed and three hours later the child died.

Grove City Man Killed in Crash

BUTLER, Pa., Nov. 2.—Ludwig Sex, 22, of Grove City, was killed today when his automobile struck a culvert near Harrisville. Sex and two other men were on the way to Branchton to work on the Bessemer and Lake Erie Railroad.

PANTAGES AGAIN FACES CO-ED

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 2.—(INS.)—Alexander Pantages, wealthy retired vaudeville magnate, today was to go to court for his second trial on charges that he attacked Eunice Pringle, young co-ed dancer.

Pantages was convicted of the charge on October 27, 1929, and was sentenced to one to 50 years in prison. The conviction later was reversed and Pantages was granted a new trial.

The long-delayed retrial was set before Judge Marshall F. McComb.

Chief among the state's 21 witnesses was Miss Pringle, daughter of a suburban high school teacher, who has abandoned her hopes of being a success on the stage for a business career. The girl said:

"I dread the ordeal of baring my soul more than the first time, but I must go through with it."

The deposit was to remain in the bank four years, under an agreement made by the union's treasurer to aid in preserving the institution. The suit was brought on the bond of George Kondar, treasurer, who also was a bank president in Johnstown.

G. O. P. MACHINE SPLIT OVER AID TO LAWRENCE

Coyne's Opponents Fear Increased Power If Ally Wins Election Tomorrow

dates supporting Mansfield intensified their drive for Barr over the week-end, though Mansfield himself maintained silence as to his preference for a third man on the county board. Undisputed evidence that many of Mansfield's strongest backers were for Lawrence in a bi-partisan deal is causing reprisals in districts where Mansfield was strong in the primary, and some of Mansfield's friends today expressed the fear that he would be severely cut in Independent Republican sections, though not enough to affect his election.

PLUMPING SEEN

In some districts controlled by Coyne it was reported today "plumping" would be attempted for Lawrence in an effort to defeat Barr, and that Mansfield would be ignored. For this opposition to Barr the Coyne machine is expecting that Mansfield will aid Lawrence in McKeesport, though the Senator sticks to his declaration for the straight Republican ticket. This declaration has been tinged recently with bitterness toward McGovern.

Barr today charged that "Coyne, the De Rosas, the Volpes, the Bryans, the Cavanaughs, the O'Malleys, the Veroskeys, the Veronas," and other lieutenants of the Kline-Armstrong machine were seeking to put over Lawrence, even though the Mayor and Armstrong declared themselves for the Republican ticket at Saturday's meeting of the Republican city and county committees. He cited the distribution of sample ballots showing how votes could be cast for Mansfield and Lawrence.

Barr asserted that if he and McGovern were elected they would be more than administrators in the county commissioners office. They would meet the fight for mayor and five councilmen at the next municipal election.

KLINE ABSENT

In the usual pre-election Twenty-first Ward meeting yesterday, Councilman Harry Little, a hauling contractor, set himself up as a constitutional lawyer, William Herd, ward chairman, presided, but Mayor Kline, who had been invited, did not attend. Expressions at the meeting were in the interest of Lawrence first, with Mansfield the second choice. Little said the Constitution called for minority representation for the Democratic party and that Independent tickets were not to be considered.

The Pittsburgh newspapers, he said, were responsible for upsetting the old system of throwing a sop to Democrats. The Constitution does not confer minority power to any party in Allegheny County, as Little claimed, the election laws merely saying that a voter may vote for only two candidates for Commissioner.

Little has been following the Mayor closely, being one of the Councilmen who voted against an investigation of the Department of Supplies when charges were first preferred.

STRESS REGULARITY

Assemblyman James H. McClure, chairman of the campaign committee, said:

"This committee at all times has urged the electors to cast their votes in the Republican column for the Republican ticket and this is its final advice to the voters."

Mrs. Laura Hinnau, vice chairman of the Republican County Committee, said:

"The Republican women of Allegheny County have been responding nobly to our appeal for the Republican ticket. Despite efforts to becloud the issue and despite the paying of an army of women workers to solicit voters for 'mushroom' tickets, I am sure the Republican women will stand loyally by the ticket they voted for and nominated in the primary."

Despite the statements of McClure and Mrs. Hinnau, attaches at the Republican headquarters predicted that Lawrence would receive a heavy vote in the Legislative districts included in the Mansfield Senatorial district. Plainly incensed by the attacks on Mansfield by McGovern and Barr, they said that Mansfield's friends would see that Lawrence received plenty of assistance.

Philadelphia Voting Expected to Be Quiet

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 2.—(INS.)—Quiet and serenity appeared today to be the order when Philadelphians go to polls in the "off year" balloting tomorrow. It is forecast as one of the most unexciting election days in the history of the city. The only contests expected are among Democratic party factions.

Former Mayor J. Hampton Moore, Republican nominee for mayor, is expected to be elected without trouble, and Charles F. Kelly, G. O. P. candidate for district attorney is looked upon as the successor of District Attorney Monaghan.

'Alpern Aides Urged To Vote 'Regular'

Supporters of Louis Alpern for County Commissioner today were urged to vote the straight Republican ticket by C. V. Shoup, who was Alpern's campaign manager. Alpern recently announced his withdrawal from the race.

Professor Pickering, whose playthings are the nebulae, stars and planets, has found an interesting "new" object in space. No human eye has seen it, but its existence, size and weight are proved by its effect on the planet Uranus.

The new heavenly guest, called "Planet P," has a diameter of 44,000 miles, whereas our earth is only 8,000 miles through. Its distance from the sun varies from five to nine billion miles.

Mitchell Reynolds, 3d, fifteen months old, inherits from his great-grandmother, Mrs. Suzy, $1,765,415. When he gets it, with interest, at twenty-one, he will have about $3,500,000.

The foolish say, "lucky baby." That depends on what he inherited in the brain, at birth, and on his education.

How would you prepare a young baby to receive $3,500,000 at the age of twenty-one in such a way as to prevent his being made a fool by money and by Schophanis?

JAPAN WARNS RUSSIANS

SOUTH DEMOCRATIC

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (Universal) — The Democratic rebellion which swept the southern states three years ago seems to have spent its entire force with the rejection of Governor Al Smith. This is clearly indicated by reports that come to New York and Washington.

Only the selection of Mr. Smith as the next Presidential candidate might cause the revolt to flare up again.

REVOLT IN BRAZIL

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 30 (INS). — Rebellious forces in Pernambuco are besieged by Federal troops and are expected to surrender hourly, it was stated in dispatches from Rio De Janeiro today. The messages quoted government officials as stating that the revolutionary movement had been suppressed.

EDISON WILL FOUGHT

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 30 (INS).—William L. Edison of Westover Hills, fashionable Wilmington suburb, revealed today that he will contest the will of Thomas A. Edison, which left the majority of his estate to his two youngest sons.

TENSION GROWS

MOSCOW, Oct. 30 (INS). —The increasing strain placed on Russo-Japanese relations by the Manchurian crisis was clearly revealed today by close study of the coup diplomatic exchanges between the Soviet foreign office and the Japanese envoy at Moscow.

Passages in the remarks exchanged by the Japanese ambassador, Koki Hirota, and Leo M. Karakhan, vice-commissar for foreign affairs, strike the attention with all the force of a red danger signal, some observers said.

TRADE IMPROVES

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Increased production in eight groups of merchandise during the current year as compared with 1930 has been reported in answers to a questionnaire sent out by the National Association of Manufacturers.

HOOVER OPPOSED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30. The Navy league summoned its executive committee today to meet the charges by President Hoover that it had spread "untruths and distortions of fact" regarding his naval policy.

TRANSMITTED BY RADIOMARINE CORP. OF AMERICA

SUN-TELEGRAPH EXTRA RADIOED

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 2 Radio extras of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph were broadcast to two ships at sea from a short wave station of the General Electric Company here last Friday night.

The extras sent to the steamship American Banker, which is returning to New York from Plymouth, and the Steamship President Harding, which cleared New York Wednesday, included front page and sporting news, closing stock quotations, and Robert L. Ripley's feature, "Believe It Or Not."

Broadcastin done in connection with experiments being staged by the Radiomarine Corporation of America, in conjunction with the Hearst Radio Service, is far different from the ordinary method of sending news to ships at sea.

In this instance, a miniature Sun-Telegraph was made up in the editorial and composing rooms of the Times-Union, the Hearst newspaper in Albany, 17 miles from here, and actual pictures of the pages were sent over the air by a process of facsimile reproduction, to be caught on board the ship.

LETTERS URGE DE ROSA VOTE

Hundred of voters of the Lincoln avenue district, Twelfth Ward, received letters today urging them to support DeRosa, Ellis and Lawrence, if they expected future political favors.

The letters bearing the typewritten signature, "Twelfth Ward Republican Association" advised voters to mark an X at the top of the ballot for a straight Republican ticket, which includes Michael DeRosa for alderman and Gus Ellis, a city detective, for constable, and to mark one X for David Lawrence, Democrat, for County Commissioner.

The letter in part states:

"If the Lincoln avenue people put this ticket over with a big majority then you will be entitled to consideration as to jobs and favors. The other side can do nothing for you because Mayor Kline will not recognize them. Mr. DeRosa, Sr., is the ward representative of Mayor Kline and everything must go through Mr. DeRosa, Sr. You must go along with our ticket if you think we should do things for you as this thing works both ways, and we think we have been very patient with the voters of Lincoln avenue, but now we must have a definite stand one way or the other. You come out in the open for our candidates if you want us to help you."

NEW VOTE BOARD APPOINTED

Following the removal of the indicted election officers in the Second District, Fifth Ward, Judge James H. Gray appointed Rose Gordon, 39 Davenport street, Judge; John Outten, majority inspector, and Milton Bowser, minority inspector. Miss Gordon succeeds Thurston McDowell. Outton takes the place of S. Ludick and Bowser takes the place of Louis Rosen. The places of two clerks will be filled by the inspectors.

It was reported the boards of three other districts would be removed today and new officers appointed. These districts are the First Forward Township; Sixteenth, Nineteenth Ward, and Ninth, Twentieth Ward. The court removed the board in the Fourth District of Wilmerding Saturday. The judge pointed out that five members of the board of the Fifteenth District, Sixth Ward, now are serving two and three-year terms in the workhouse for election fraud involving phantom voters.

VOTE MACHINES IN NINE WARDS TOMORROW

Devices Also to Be Used in Duquesne and Clairton; Balked in McKeesport

Voting machines will be used tomorrow in nine Pittsburgh wards and in all districts of Duquesne and Clairton, the Bureau of Elections announced today.

The Pittsburgh wards are the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth and Tenth.

Machines are not being used in McKeesport, where they were installed in the primary, because of the great number of party names pre-empted for the general election. There are election tickets, some complete, others carrying only a partial list of candidates, before the voters of that city and the machines are not equipped to handle such a number.

Following the numerous breakdowns of the machines in the primary election, Gilbert C. Cloonan, head of the Elections Bureau, announced that manual ballots would be prepared for each district in which machines were installed for the general election and would be placed in use at once if a machine developed serious trouble.

Approximately 1,100 machines are on hand, enough to man the entire county.

Due to their late delivery—although the contract specified all were to be in the county offices by mid-summer—there was not sufficient time to assemble the machines nor to print the ballots for them, according to Cloonan.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 2—(AP.)—Mrs. Mary Curtis Richardson, portrait painter of international fame, died at her home here yesterday after an illness of a month. She was 84. Mrs. Richardson's works have been on exhibition in London, New York, Washington and other art centers of the world.

VOTE RETURNS WATCHED FOR 1932 TREND

Control of House at Stake In Election of 5; Smith, Roosevelt Power in Test

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—With an eye to the 1932 national campaign, party leaders look to the outcome of scattered elections tomorrow for a definite political trend.

Whether the Republicans or Democrats will organize the incoming House may be decided by the results of five special Congressional elections.

In New York, the strength of Gov. Franklin Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith will be tested in their dispute over a forest conservation amendment sponsored by Roosevelt and opposed by the former Democratic Presidential nominee.

The Democrats have assaulted the Republican strongholds in the First Ohio and the Eight Michigan districts, but virtually concede the Second Pennsylvania to their opponents. They expect to retain the Twentieth Ohio and the Seventh New York without difficulty.

The present House lineup is Democrats, 214; Republicans, 213; Farmer Laborites, 1; vacancies, 7. One of the two other vacancies usually Republican will be filled December 1. Gaining this the Republicans would hold House control by one, if there is no change tomorrow in the political status of the five seats.

A Governor is to be elected in New Jersey. Democrats are claiming former Gov. A. Harry Moore will win over David Baird, former Republican Senator. A victory there, they contend, would be a rebuke to the national leadership of President Hoover during the economic crisis.

43 New Cases Put Under Quarantine

The following new quarantine cases were reported by the City Health Department today: Scarlet fever, 7; diphtheria, 2; measles, 5; whooping cough, 5; chickenpox, 10; mumps, 6, and pneumonia, 8.

Gold Hunter Ends His Life Beside Bier of Pal

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Nov. 2. (AP.)—The gold Fred Reilly and Johnny Burke, nomadic prospectors, mined together will be sold to defray expense of burying them side by side.

Beside the body of Reilly, the Coroner found this note:

"We always lived one for the other. I just can't go on."

In the undertaker's mail box was $115 in bills and another note from Reilly which directed that this money, together with that raised from sale of a small bottle of coarse gold and the prospecting car, be used to "bury us side by side."

'STEAM ROLLER' CHARGED

Charges that political followers of Joseph G. Armstrong used steam roller methods to bring about the indorsement of David L. Lawrence, Democratic nominee, and William D. Mansfield, Republican candidate for County Commissioner by the executive board of District No. 6, International Association of Machinists, were made today by George Shafer, a member of the board.

The indorsement was given out Saturday morning by E. J. Kelly, president of the board. Kelly according to Schafer, is a county garage employe and a member of the Armstrong organization.

Schafer charges that the matter was brought up at the last minute, after one number had left the meeting. He said that in spite of protests from him and another member, Kelly had the indorsement passed.

STATE POLICE DETAILED HERE

HARRISBURG, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Maj. Lynn G. Adams, superintendent of state police, today said he had detailed a number of state policemen to Allegheny and Schuylkill counties to guard the polls tomorrow in certain districts.

Under the state law these policemen must not come within 100 feet of a polling place except to cast their own ballots or to quell a riot.

The Allegheny request came from the Pittsburgh Board of Registration Commissioners. Maj. Adams said the Schuylkill request was made by several groups and that he would also comply with them. He did not say how many policemen would be detailed to each county, nor where they would be stationed.

NEW ELECTION INDICTMENTS DELAYED

Assistant Prosecutor's Illness Delays Work; New Grand Jury Sworn

The November grand jury, sworn in today, was told by Judge James H. Gray that it undoubtedly would be asked to continue the investigation of fraud in the primary election, into which the September and October juries already have delved deeply.

Indictments by the October jury were expected today but the District Attorney's office said the illness of Assistant District Attorney Harry R. Phillips made this impossible.

INDICTMENTS DELAYED

Phillips, indictment expert, was unable to work Saturday or Sunday, it was said, and therefore the indictments, believed for the most part to charge Second Ward Republican workers with illegal use of tax receipts, were not ready today.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park was understood to have withheld the jury presentment—its recommendation for the indictments—so as not to have Tuesday, a court holiday, intervene between the recommendation and the indictments.

EXPECTED WEDNESDAY

The presentment and indictments are expected to be returned on Wednesday, the former soon after court opens and the indictments by mid-afternoon.

Due to the Tuesday holiday and the fact that the October jury is still in session, the November jury was dismissed today until Wednesday after hearing Judge Gray's charge.

Theodore A. Motherall, an insurance broker, with offices in the Investment building, was named foreman.

So far, 56 have been indicted in the primary fraud probe; 18 by the September jury and 38 by the October jury.

Banker Shoots Self, Institution Closes

SEDALIA, Mo., Nov. 2.—(AP.)—William H. Powell, president of the Citizens National Bank of Sedalia, shot and critically wounded himself with a revolver at his home late yesterday, after which the board of directors met and decided not to open the bank today. Physicians held out little hope for Powell's recovery.

The bank, with deposits of approximately $2,250,000, was one of the largest in Central Missouri. Members of the Powell family expressed belief the shooting was accidental.

Politicians' Sons Make First Bow To N. Y. Voters

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 2.—(AP.)—The sons of two famous rival party leaders in New York politics will make their bow to the electorate at Tuesday's state-wide election.

In Livingston County, James Jeremiah Wadsworth, the stalwart son of former United States Senator James W. Wadsworth, is the Republican choice for the assembly post.

MEXICO QUAKE WRECKS HOMES

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Dispatches from Oaxaca, Mexico's earthquake center, indicated severe damage may have resulted from a shock that was felt in Mexico City at 5:37 p. m. yesterday.

One message said many houses were destroyed, but owing to the confusion the number of casualties had not been determined. The city's inhabitants were terrorized by subterranean noises and fled to open fields.

Many persons were thought to have escaped injury in the city's principal theater because it was intermission time when the quake shook the building. Most of the audience had fled to the streets before the shock cut off the lights.

ARMS HOLIDAY TERMS PUZZLE LEAGUE

Fourteen Nations Accept, But No One Is Sure Pact Has Become Effective

GENEVA, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—The League of Nations secretariat today held affirmative replies of 14 nations to the proposal for a year's armaments truce, but wondered, nevertheless, whether the agreement is in force.

Yesterday was the date for the beginning of the truce, which was originally proposed by Italy, Great Britian, Germany and France. None of these four nations has yet officially reported its attitude.

On the other hand, acceptances of the proposal are on file from the United States, Russia, Japan and 11 others, but all are conditioned on the participation of other states, and some have other exceptions.

Officials of the League said they were unable to define the status of the holiday and that there is no precedent for procedure in such a state of affairs. In some quarters it was suggested that a conference of diplomatic representatives may be called to discuss the provisos of each nation and try to harmonize them.

KINGSLEY HOUSE GETS BUHL AID

Establishment of a special program in human relations at Kingsley House, Larimer avenue, has been made possible by a grant by the Buhl Foundation, according to an announcement today.

The program will be carried out on a two-year demonstration basis, following the policy of the foundation to aid in establishing new and experimental activities, rather than to support work already included in ordinary budgets of welfare organizations.

The new procedure, to include employment of workers trained in psychiatry and community organization, is based on a study of the type of work at settlements such as Kingsley House.

Bandit Captured By Olympic Runner

QUINCY, Ill., Nov. 2.—(AP.)—When M. Likes, 16, held up a filling station Saturday he did not allow for the fact that Morgan Taylor, a bystander, was a world-famous runner. It proved his undoing.

Taylor, former Grinnell College athlete and champion of the 400-meter hurdles in the Olympic games, led two other witnesses of the holdup in pursuit of Likes and his companion. He caught Likes four blocks away, approximately the favorite distance of his running days.

CONVICT VISITS WIFE, RETURNS

MOUNDSVILE, W. Va., Nov. 2 — (AP.) — In keeping with his promise a month ago to Gov. W. G. Conley, L. M. Frantz, former Huntington banker, returned unguarded to West Virginia Penitentiary from Baltimore, Md., where he went a month ago to be near his wife, reported at that time to be dying.

Frantz, who had served a year of his 10-year sentence for violation of the state banking laws, was released from the prison on October 3 after relatives had appealed to Gov. Conley. Upon his release, he hurried by airplane to Baltimore and had since remained near his wife, ill in Johns Hopkins Hospital.

On the expiration yesterday of his month's leave of absence, Frantz returned by automobile to the prison and resumed the life of a convict.

PAYLESS DAYS FOR FIREMEN

The 1,100 firemen of Pittsburgh, from Chief Richard Smith down, will take a day off without pay each week for the remainder of the year, in line with the economy move to prevent a city deficit, Smith announced today.

Each fireman customarily has two days off each month with pay. All will take these off and two additional days without pay.

The Mayor and members of City Council have not yet revealed whether they intend to follow the example of their department heads in voluntarily taking time off as a money saving measure.

Man May Boast In Courtship, Judge Rules

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 2 — (AP.)—A man has a legal right to boast to a girl under the spell of a romantic moon, Superior Judge Thomas C. Gould has ruled.

The Judge denied the plea of Lotus Phillips for an annulment of her marriage to Stanley Phillips because she said he told her he was prosperous and could give her a number of expensive things, but never did.

"Every girl is promised all manner of things under a soft moon," said the Judge. "Not that they expect to take such prattle literally, but they sort of expect the wooer to paint a rosy picture of the future. One of the oldest laws entitled a man to 'puff his wares.'"

CHARGED FENCE INJURES MAN

In his rush to get out Frick, it was reported, crawled through the barbed wire on the top of the fence and dropped 10 feet to the ground. The wires were believed to have been accidentally charged and caused Frick to fall. Park and light company officials, after inspecting the wires today, reported the wires were not charged.

HOOVER SEEKS NAVY LEAGUE SHOWDOWN

President Awaits Roster Before Naming Prober; Will Demand Apology

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—The strange situation of President Hoover battling openly with a militant big Navy organization while a cabinet officer struck out at a pacifist foundation today swirled about the Navy.

The President was working toward a showdown with the Navy League, and particularly its president, William H. Gardiner, who described him as showing "abysmal ignorance" of naval matters.

Secretary Adams charged the world peace foundation with interpreting national defense statistics "in a manner inimical to the United States and in a manner favorable to the national defense interests of foreign powers."

The bitter dispute between Mr. Hoover and the Navy League entered its second week with Gardiner lacking the full support of his membership. Henry Breckinridge, a former president of the league and a Democratic assistant Secretary of War under Woodrow Wilson, yesterday broke ranks, declaring:

"I desire to dissociate myself from so much of the statement as speaks with disrespect of the president of the United States."

The chief executive is awaiting a roster of the league before naming a committee to investigate its charges against his naval policies. He has already branded the accusations as "untruths and distortions of fact" and warned Gardiner he would expect a correction and an apology at the conclusion of the inquiry. Several members of the league are to be named to the inquiry committee.

DRY ACT TIES UP MILLIONS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—An estimate that from an eighth to a quarter of a billion dollars worth of real estate is being "frozen" each year by prohibition padlock proceedings was made today by the Crusaders, an anti-prohibition organization.

In the last 24 months, it figured, private incomes of about $39,000,000 were "junked" in a "futile attempt to enforce the prohibition law."

Using the report of Attorney General Mitchell, the Crusaders took the number of injunctions granted and multiplied them by $25,000 to gain their total. This $25,000 figure was the average value of 58 pieces of property padlocked in the District of Columbia, and they held the average would go higher in larger cities.

Memory of Harding Honored on Birthday

MARION, O., Nov. 2.—(AP.)—A simple ceremony was conducted here yesterday at the tomb of the late President Warren G. Harding in observance of his 66th birthday anniversary today.

A wreath from President Hoover was laid at the tomb without attendant ceremony, and later the Sons of Veterans of the Civil War in Ohio placed a wreath on the tomb as part of a program in which speakers extolled Mr. Harding. Today two uniformed members of Cincinnati Boy Scout troops will lay another wreath at his grave.

Man's Home Bombed In Bakers' Dispute

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 2.—(INS.)—A two-state price war between Italian bakers in New York and Pennsylvania was believed today to have resulted in the bombing of the home of Michael Staccardo, the third blast within the past four days.

Staccardo's home was badly damaged but no one was injured. Staccardo was selling Italian bread 1 cent less than the price established by New York bakers, police said.

OLD-WORLD TOUCHES SEEN IN MODERN ACCESSORIES

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Nov. 2. — It's the little things that count when it comes to the wardrobe, just as it is in life. And so we find that the biggest, the most important houses are just as proud of the small accessories designed by them as they are of their most magnificent creations. Sports jewelry, flowers, purses, evening bags, gloves, distinctive trimmings, are to be found in the showrooms of the designers and usually there are one or two novelties that become so publicized, so famous that the name of the house is instantly identified with them, as in the case of Chanel jewelry.

THIS YEAR'S CROP of smart accessories are up to par and in many cases smartness and the old-world touch have been adroitly combined. These accessories are a source of great revenue to a house, as women buy so many of them at each visit, even if they do not order a frock. They are very hard to resist, as you no doubt know from experience.

* * *

TODAY WE SHOW you sketches of some grand new novelties sponsored by Lucile Paray and Chanel. The Paray items have a smart old-world touch, as they are of raffia. Yes, our old friend, raffia, this time in red and white and highly lacquered so that it resembles patent leather, is used for the flower and for the wide belt. It is woven by hand and is used for buttons on coats and dresses, and for woven bracelets and sport necklaces. The Chanel contributions to smartness are also shown.

THE GLOVES combine black patent leather and plain white glace kid, surely a dashing combination. The inside of the fingers and thumb and the palm of the glove are of the white kid and the glove is stitched in white. The flat purse is of black patent leather with white stitching and a black galalith top. Ideal with a black and white, or all black outfit and typical of the mode at its smartest.

Friel, conciliator for the United States Department of Labor, was in Pittsburgh today to attend meetings between committees representing the Window Glass Cutters League of America and the Window Glass Manufacturers Association, at which new wage agreements are being discussed. The old wage scale expired last week and at present window glass cutters are out of work pending a new scale agreement.

About 200 men in Pittsburgh are affected by the expiration of the scale, according to Glen W. McCabe, president of the league. Mr. McCabe stated that the employers association refuses to go along on the old scale and has proposed a cut in salaries.

Missing W. Va. Girl, 2 Men Sought Here

Pittsburgh police were asked today to look for two men in a closed automobile bearing a Pennsylvania license, believed to have kidnaped 17-year-old Katherine Brackman from her home in Huntington, W. Accidents Claim More Child Lives Than Disease

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2—(AP.)—A nation-wide survey by the United States Public Health Service reveals that school children between 5 and 19 years of age are more likely to die from mishaps, especially automobile accidents, than any disease.

Automobiles cause one-third of all accidental deaths of school children, the survey shows.

Drownings cause about half as many deaths as automobiles. Burns, bullet wounds, trains and falls are listed as important causes of accidental deaths.

Next to accidents, children die most from tuberculosis, heart trouble, pneumonia, diphtheria and appendicitis in the order named.

It was stated at the league secretariat today that it was hoped other acceptances would reach here during the next few days.

Housework Taught Boys as Future Husbands

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(Universal.)—Boys at the Hawthorne Junior High School are being taught that "man's place is in the home."

Miss Ethel V. Antes, their instructor, said:

"It is just as important for a boy to be trained in home duties as a girl. Last week I taught my 60 boys to make griddle cakes. This week they will learn how to make biscuits.

"Eventually we're going to have a class in ironing, too. There is no reason why these boys when they become husbands should expect their wives to press their pants and neckties."

BLAMES SISTER IN KILLING

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 2.—(INS.)—Seven-year-old Peter de Santis unconcernedly ate his breakfast in the house of detention today. To any one who asked him, he would tell just how he shot and killed his sister, Gloria, 4, "because she teased me and dirtied my school book."

Peter was held on a murder charge, but because of his youth state troopers were uncertain what disposition to make of the case. Peter told officials:

"It's Gloria's fault. She shouldn't have done it."

He re-enacted the scene of taking down the double barreled shotgun "when Gloria wouldn't be good," loading it, holding it against the little girl's dress and "pulling the trigged like my dad showed me before going away."

HALLOWEEN FUN MARKS KOMIC CLUB EVENTS

Theater Officials Donate Gay Paper Hats; Members Attend in Their Costumes

There was a festive air about the Warner Theaters Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club meetings held in Warner Theaters Saturday morning. In most of the theaters gaily-colored paper caps had been provided by the management, and hundreds of children came to the meetings wearing their Halloween costumes.

HARRIS DOWNTOWN

Every child attending the Harris, Diamond street, meeting was given an envelope containing a coin. There were pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters and half-dollars—and every child received something. This novel payday will be conducted at all the theaters in turn. Another big event at the Harris was the Barrel of Fun. The grand vester and board of governors conducted the ceremonies from the stage.

The stage entertainment was exceptionally fine. The outstanding contribution was the dancing by a team announced as the Schafer Sisters, whose real names are Miriam Staley and Jean Schafer. Their first offering was a tap dance, followed by an acrobatic number that would have done credit to the Follies or George White's Scandals.

KENYON THEATER

The Kenyon North Side Chapter had a very enthusiastic meeting. The two major prizes, fleece-lined coats, were won by Robert McKenna and Jean Richardson. Other gifts distributed included a camera, necklaces, pocketbooks and handkerchiefs.

MANOR CHAPTER

The doll contest at the Manor Chapter was a great success. There were dolls of every description and prizes were awarded for the biggest, the prettiest and the funniest. There was an excellent stage show and the program was brought to a close by the Boy Scouts ceremonial.

ARSENAL CHAPTER

Some clever youngsters in the neighborhood of the Arsenal Chapter are putting on stage shows at their Junior Komic Club meetings every week. Two members awarded leather, fleece-lined coats are Grace McCoy and Claude Monroe.

OTHER MEETINGS

Crowds of children filled the Belmar, the Cameraphone, the Enright, the Harris (Etna), the Rowland (Wilkinsburg), the Schenley and the South Hills. Members who have attended the meetings regularly are to be rewarded to a big show at the Stanley Theater Sunday afternoon, November 15. Arrangements are now being made for the big event.

Split Infinitive And 'Ain't' Held Cruel by Wife

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Cruelty to the king's English and the rules of etiquet constitute cruelty to Mrs. Helen William Morse, she said in a suit for divorce.

Mrs. Morse charged her husband John was cruel because he split infinitives, used the double negative, and said "ain't" to annoy her. He also, she added, refused to abide by the recognized rules of etiquet, much to her chagrin.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

TIM O'ROURKE was the owner of a speakeasy, the location of which should not bother you in the least. Operating since before prohibition, Tim had amassed a comfortable fortune. Nowhere near the millions, but enough to permit him to attend the race track every day and stake a little money on the ponies that he fancied.

Although few of his friends knew it, Tim lost his money via a system that had been carefully figured out. He placed aside so much for one meet—and when that was gone he was through.

Another thing about Tim: He hated to pay his bill. If a bill for two lonesome bucks could be stalled off for a week, that was great. If the bill was for $2,000 and payment could be delayed, Tim was delighted. Back of all this, you must remember, Tim O'Rourke had plenty of cash to spare.

During one summer in the not long ago, Tim O'Rourke left his employes in charge of his speakeasy and made the trip to Saratoga. When he returned he was in a surly mood.

"A tough meet, boys," he would cry. "A tough meet. Every bet I made seemed to go wrong. A very tough meet for Tim O'Rourke, my friends."

The boys would nod their domes in sympathy. If they had known the extent of Tim's bank account they would never have felt so sympathetic.

Selling soda at that time to Tim O'Rourke's saloon was a gentleman whom we will refer to as Max. Max was a hard-working fellow who knew his soda, his deliveries, his profits—and nothing else.

About the horses, Max knew slightly less than nothing. Had you told him that Man O'War was a prize bulldog, it wouldn't have disturbed him in the slightest.

Only one thing was pretty clear to him. And that was when a man had lost on the ponnies he didn't have much cash on hand.

Tim O'Rourke owed Max a bill of $200. When Max heard whispers to the effect that Tim had lost on the races, fear assailed his heart. Would he be stuck for another bill because of those rotten horses? He went to Tim's speakeasy on a Wednesday night with deep furrows lining his brow.

"Tim," he said earnestly, "you've got to let me have the $200 you owe me. I'm a married man with six kids, and times is very tough. Please let me have it."

Tim looked at him shrewdly.

"Max," he responded, "times are tough for me, too. The horses have hurt me. Tell you what I'll do. Come around here Saturday night and I'll give you half of it on account. You can have $100 on Saturday night."

Max shrugged his shoulders and left. After all, he figured, $100 was better than nothing.

All that night Max failed to sleep. The extra $100 was beginning to worry him. Perhaps he might never get it. The following morning he arose bright and early and visited his neighborhood grocer—a fellow named William Francis Xavier McCaffrey.

Bill," said Max, "I got something to ask you. Tell me something about this horse racing business. What is it like?"

McCaffery waved a hand in a motion of disgust.

"Don't talk to me about horses," he asserted. "I went down to the Guttenberg track once and lost $10 in one afternoon. I haven't been near them since. The afternoon at Guttenberg was enough for me."

The name of Guttenberg was enough for Max, too. An idea had suddenly struck him. He went home and thought it over. And that night he was once again in Tim O'Rourke's speakeasy. As soon as he could, Max took the boss to one side.

"Tim," he muttered, "it was nice of you to offer me that $100 on Saturday—but something has happened to me. I got to have the whole $200 now.

"Guess what. I went to the Guttenberg race track this afternoon and lost every cent I had playing the horses."

O'Rourke looked at the soda man with startled eyes.

"Where," he inquired, "did you say you lost your money?"

"At the Guttenberg track," responded Max.

O'Rourke smiled.

"All right," said the speakeasy owner, "come around Saturday and I'll pay you in full."

Max left. That night he slept peacefully. The following morning, a grin from ear to ear, he dropped into the grocery store of Wulliam Francis Xavier McCafferey.

"You didn't know you did me a big favor yesterday," he smiled. "But you did. Remember when I asked you about horse races? Well . . ."

And he told McCaffery the story about Tim O'Rourke and how he had fooled him with his story of his losses at the Guttenberg race track.

"What track" inquired McCaffrey, "did you tell him?"

"The Guttenberg track," repeated Max calmly.

McCaffrey laughed heartily.

"You blame fool, you!" he cried. "When I told you that I lost money at the Guttenberg track, that was more than 30 years ago. The Guttenberg race track shut down around that time and hasn't been open since."

Max's heart almost fell through the soles of his feet. Now what was he to do? Saturday was the following day. O'Rourke had promised him the full amount of his bill at that time. If he knew that Max had lied to him, there was an excellent chance that O'Rourke would never pay him at all.

On Saturday evening Max walked into the speakeasy. He searched Tim's face for some sign of anger. But he could detect nothing. He rubbed his hands.

"Well, Tim," he said, "I'm here for the $200 you promised me. Have you got it handy?"

Tim shook his head as a forlorn look came into his eyes.

"No, Max," he murmured sadly. "I haven't got the $200. I haven't even got the $100 that I told you you could have earlier in the week.

"When I tell you why, Max, you're gonna be very much surprised. The same thing that happened to you also happened to me. I went down to the Guttenberg track yesterday afternoon and got cleaned out myself!"

$30,000 Bar Raided Near University

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Complaints that liquor was being sold to Temple University students led police to raid an alleged speakeasy near the university. A man who gave his name as William Shea, 32, and said he lived there, was arrested.

Police said they seized a half gallon of whisky from behind an elaborate bar which ran the length of a long room. They estimated the barroom cost $30,000 to equip.

WALKER'S PAL DISAPPEARS

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Within eight hours after crossing the international line at Laredo, Tex., Russell T. Sherwood, wanted in New York to testify before a legislative committee, had disappeared with his bride.

Before his disappearance Sherwood said his honeymoon was turning into a "nightmare" as a result of his refusal to recognize the attempts of the legislative committee to fine him $100,000 for failing to return to testify about a strong box he held jointly with Mayor James J. Walker.

Sherwood denied he had ever been a business associate of Mayor Walker and termed as unauthorized reports that he planned to go back to New York within the next two weeks. He was subpenaed in Mexico City, but had refused to recognize the validity of the summons.

COMEDIAN ENDS LIFE WITH GUN

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—The vaudeville act of Jack Wilson, blackface mimic, won't open in Boston today as planned. Jack Wilson is dead.

The 40-year-old actor who spent a quarter of a century behind footlights, committed suicide in his hotel room yesterday. Two performers who were to have taken part in his new act opening in Boston today, called at his hotel for a rehearsal. Wilson told them to wait in the lobby. After half an hour, the performers became alarmed and sent a bell boy to Wilson's room.

The comedian lay on the floor, a target pistol beside him and a bullet wound in the head. He died later at a hospital.

Friends said he had been discouraged in recent months because of failure to obtain backing for a radio act.

N. Y. Woman Ends Caribbean Flight

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Clara Livingson, said to be the first woman to pilot an airplane through the Caribbean, arrived yesterday, landing her own plane on her own field at her country place, a few miles from San Juan.

Miss Livingson, whose home is in Jamestown, N. Y., although she long has been a resident here, obtained a commercial flier's license recently. She left Roosevelt Field, N. Y., last Sunday, stopping in Cuba and Santo Domingo en route.

O'Donoghue Named to Washington Bench

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Daniel W. O'Donoghue, of this city, was named by President Hoover today as associate justice of the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

Buster Keaton May Realize Ambition to Play Tragic Role

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 2.

An exciting rumor going the rounds today is that Buster Keaton will play the tragic role of Kringelin in "Grand Hotel."

The cast for M. G. M.'s talkie version of the Vicki Baum novel already bulges with celebrities. Greta Garbo will play the dancer, Wallace Beery, the factory owner, and Joan Crawford, his secretary.

Buster's role, if he gets it, will be the pathetic factory worker whom doctors give but two weeks to live and who comes to the city to spend his last days in a round of gayety. The part will be one of the plums of the production.

Buster Keaton

Edmund Goulding is strong for Buster, and it is more than likely that the sad-faced comic will realize an ambition dear to all of his kind—a chance to play a tragic role.

ROGERS ON THE MOVIES

Will Rogers was the sensation of the dinner given by the film people to Banker A. H. Giannini.

Rising to follow Jack Warner, who had proven no mean wit himself, Will led off:

And, a nifty on Wall street:

"The bankers," said Will, "have had a great influence on the film business. When Wall street came in, the audiences went out."

MORE GOSSIP

Another cycle of chain letters has risen up like a grasshopper plague. Maurice Chevalier has received 400 in the last 10 days. . . . Claudette Colbert's reunion with Norman Foster has been marred by her illness. She has been sick for almost a week now. . . . Peter Diego is recovered from a seven weeks' siege in the hospital. . . . Hollywood is much concerned about Robert Williams. Scheduled to start a picture with Constance Bennett, he was stricken with appendicitis and, delaying an operation too long, he now is in a serious condition. This actor is respected out here for his fine performance in "Rebound," "Platinum Blonde" and other recent films. . . . Lowell Sherman will direct Edna May Oliver in "Ladies of the Jury." Contrary to his custom, he will not have a part. . . . Ramon Novarro's M. G. M. contract still is unsigned. He is going to New York to make some records and, whatever happens in the contract matter, will not make another picture before March. . . . Joan Bennett's doctor is allowing her to dance and swim on her ocean trip to New York.

Robert Williams

IN THE NEWS

Glorified into a film contract by Florenz Ziegfeld, Virginia Bruce will have part with John and Lionel Barrymore in "Arsene Lupin." Virginia originally was a Hollywood girl but got little notice until Broadway's most famous picker carried her East to go into his Follies.

NO FAKING HERE

The reason Jimmy Durante can't return to Hollywood is a bad cold contracted on his fishing trip. As Harry Brand remarks:

DOES PART TOO WELL

Director Josef Von Sternberg wanted an aged Chinese extra to hurl a curse upon a locomotive for a scene in "Shanghai Express."

As Von Sternberg was about to okay the scene, Gubbins whispered in his ear.

"He said what?" cried Joe. "Kill that scene. We'll do it over again. And tell Wang he's not playing Captain Flagg."

Operetta

Gertrude Lang will be prominent in the cast of "The Student Prince," operetta returning to the Alvin next week.

Famous Painting Given To Kay Francis

A portrait of Nell Gwynn, done by Sir Peter Lely nearly 300 years ago, has been given to Kay Francis by her mother. The painting was cut from its frame in Buckingham Palace 150 years ago by George Howard, who fled to the United States. Years later, Miss Francis' maternal grandfather befriended a man in Galena, Ill., who proved to be Howard's son and who gave the painting to his benefactor.

La Colbert Vacationing In Hollywood

Claudette Colbert, having completed her role as co-star with Gary Cooper in "His Woman" at New York studios, is vacationing in Hollywood. She will return to New York on November 2 to begin work in her next starring picture, the title of which has not been announced.

Airlines Reduce Passenger Rates

Reductions in the air travel fares between Pittsburgh and Cleveland, Washington and Akron, were put into effect yesterday, according to H. S. Martin, president of the Pennsylvania Airlines, Inc. Air rate reductions amounting to 25 per cent down to approximately rail plus Pullman fare were announced.

Crafton to Observe Education Week

American Education week will be observed next week in Crafton schools. Tuesday and Thursday, November 10 and 12, have been designated as visiting days, with a reception by the Parent-Teachers Association in the high school on Thursday evening. Joseph N. Mackrell will speak on "Good Citizenship."

Cricket Is Bad News On Sound Stage

Crickets may bring good luck to a home, but they're bad news on a soundproof stage in a picture studio.

One of the chirping insects played havoc with the production schedule of Ruth Chatterton's "Once a Lady" at a Hollywood studio and had the director, players, sound experts, cameramen and a score of other studio aides poking about in cracks and corners for two hours. A floor board had to be removed before the hid-ing place of the insect could be reached.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"The Mikado," ever-young Gilbert and Sullivan light opera, opens in the Alvin this evening, with Mme. Schumann-Heink in the role of Katisha. Matinee customers will get theirs Wednesday and Saturday.

Next week the Alvin will continue the musical cycle by staging "The Student Prince" again. Gertrude Lang will be the femme in the case and Gavgie Hassell will give the comedy a big play. Allan Prior will be the royal stude. The b. o. will pasteboard you up for this revisitation as early as Thursday.

Small Timer say he notes that there is a revival in another branch of the holdup business, the manufacture of suspenders.

"The Vanities" of Earl Carroll, claiming much to be vain about in the matter of maids, will light up the Nixon tonight after a week of dimness. Herbie Williams, Chaz Chase and Jack Benny will make fun of whatever there may be to make fun of.

Shakespeare comes to the Nixon next week, direct—or almost direct—from Bill's home town, Stratford. The Stratford-Upon-Avon Players, these, and they bring quite a passel of plays, including "The Merry Wives of Windsor" (opener), "Midsummer Night's Dream," "King Lear," "A Winter's Tale," "King Henry IV" (part one), "Twelfth Night," "Midsummer Night's Dream," "As You Like It" and "The Taming of the Shrew." What no "Hamlet!" Tickles Thursday.

The new opening days Thursday, for the Stanley, Friday for the Davis, and Saturday for the Warner, are to be permanent—at least temporarily. Stanley and Warner are showing sound pix of the Tech-Notre Dame grid battle.

Barrymore's In Warner Drama

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

John Barrymore sweeps to a new dramatic height in the title role of "The Mad Genius," the picture current in the Warner. He plays a club-footed maestro, whose devouring desire to dance is frustrated by his physical deformity. So he endeavors to put his desire, his very soul itself into the body of another.

A Russian peasant boy is selected by the maestro for his counterpart. And he strives to mold the boy's life into the pattern that he dreams his own should be. And he stands, like a jealous god, to see that nothing intervenes.

In the rhythm of the ballet the maestro sees beauty; but in nothing else. Love he views as a foul thing that looms to wreck the artistic career he has planned for his prodigy. And when love comes to the boy, in the person of Miriam Marsh, the maestro becomes calculating and cruel.

The action whirls through capitals of Europe and builds to a sensational climax. However, to bring a happy conclusion to its young romance, the maestro must be erased from the picture. And, in the manner of this erasing, the drama goes mechanical.

But there is great excitement in the concluding episode. The corpse of a madman becomes an unexpected part of a stage setting. A packed opera house goes into hysteria.

Barrymore's art of dramatic expression is only equaled by his art of makeup. And, like the character he portrays, there is a streak of genius somewhere in the actor.

The photography is exceptional.

Gyles Isham, appears in "A Winter's Tale," which will be part of the Stratford-Upon-Avon Festival Company's repertoire in the Nixon next week.

Mary Boland Is Signed By Film Studio

Mary Boland, star of the New York stage success, "The Vinegar Tree," and long recognized as one of Broadway's leading actresses, has signed a long-term contract as a Paramount actress. She was recently seen in comedy roles of "Personal Maid" and "Secrets of a Secretary," picture productions.

Things I Never Knew Till Now

(Don't make it serious—too mysterious)

That at the dedication of the George Washington Bridge, Cabinet members and others all had their say. That is, except O. H. Ammann, the chief engineer, whose genius made it all possible.

That the Secretary of the Treasury, Andrew Mellon, has his suits made in New York but imports the cloth. (Yoo-hoo, Prosperity!)

That the brass tablet at No. 10, Pearl St. marks the site of the first N. Y. City Hall. The correct site is No. 73 Pearl St.

That the phonographs in the penny arcades (yeah, we still have 'em) differ little from the original Edison model.

That in Germany they tip their hats to the cops.

That till now, a show producer, even though he move to a theater next door, has been obliged by union rules to hire a transfer van.

That a Ford is made with the aid of diamonds! ! !

That, according to Canadian statistics, 59 per cent of American tourists go there to view new scenery. (Tee, hee—such jokes!)

That kerosene, rubbed into the scalp, prevents falling hair.

That, in Holland, marriages at the City Hall are free on Friday. Other days you pay from 40 cents to $40, according to day and hour.

That a visitor must not bring rubles into Russia.

BELLAIRE, O., Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Constanzo Allietta, 59, a farmer of Rock Hill, near here, was attacked and killed by a bull near his home. His son, Joseph, 11, was a witness.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 2.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Did you ever spend a lonesome hour in a strange town? You all think you have, but you haven't. The lonesomest hour in the entire world is in Mexico City and Madrid, Spain, on Sunday afternoon between the hours of four and five, when every one has gone to the bull fights. I am not against it. Every nation for their own affairs and sports. Some nations like to see blood and some to see their victims suffer from speculation. It's all in your point of view. They kill the bull very quick—Wall street lets you live and suffer. Yours, WILL.

3 Hurt in Auto, Patrol Crash After Hit-Run Death

FIVE INJURED IN BLOOMFIELD MELEE

Girl Struck by Stone When Spectator's Protest Leads To Fight; Walsh Angered

An order prohibiting Sunday football games in the city, issued a year ago by Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh and generally ignored, is now to be strictly enforced, Walsh said today.

Walsh acted because of a riot which broke up a game at Dean's Field, Bloomfield, yesterday, with a girl, two policemen and two Negroes as casualties. Walsh said:

"Some inspectors have forgotten there is a police order against all Sunday football games. If this order is not carried out, there will be some suspensions."

CHILD HURT

Dorothy Wessell, 10, of 4702 Lorigan street, a witness at the game, was struck with a stone, while Patrolman Fred Kleber, of Forty-third Street Station, was slashed on the leg when he attempted to take a razor from a Negro, according to the police report.

Patrolman John Armbruster was cut on the cheek by a stone, and Jennings Council, 30, Negro, and his brother, William, of 3408 Munro street, were cut on the head. All the injured were treated at West Penn Hospital.

SPECTATOR PROTESTS

The riot occurred during the last quarter of the game between the Bloomfield Fleetfoots and the Cossacks, the latter a Negro team, when a spectator protested against a penalty imposed on the Fleetfoot team.

The protest was the signal for a melee, police said, and immediately after it was made, the stands were emptied and the gridiron was a scene of clubbing, brick throwing and slugging.

Cuban General's Son Jailed in Bombing

HAVANA, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Antonio Mendieta, student and nephew of Col. Carlos Mendieta, unsuccessful presidential candidate in the 1924 elections that put President Machado into power, was a prisoner, with his uncle, in Cabana Fortress.

The youth, whose father, Gen. Pablo Mendieta, once was chief of police in Havana, was accused of having set off explosives at La Salle College yesterday. The bomb caused slight damage.

Steam Leak Damages Men's Shop in Hotel

ROLLING ROCK HUNTS BEGIN

LIGONIER, Pa., Nov. 2.—Rolling Rock Hunt Club, with its 18,000 acres of hunting preserve, will attract many of Western Pennsylvania's elite tomorrow, as the club's hunting season for game begins.

The heavyily wooded hills of Laurel and Chestnut ridges are stocked with game, thousands of Japanese, Reeves and ring-necked pheasants; more than 5,000 wild ducks, mostly mallards, and several hundred quail, in addition to rabbits and other game, large and small.

More than 400 members of the club from Pittsburgh and adjoining sections are expected to intermittently appear for the club activities during the coming month. They will hunt in parties.

Don Terrell, Scot gamekeeper for the preserve, yesterday whistled his 5,000 mallards up into the woods, where they will remain, except for feeding, during the remainder of the year. The season for hunting these will be unlimited, Terrell said, due to the present crop being third generation fowl raised on the place.

Virtually all the game on the place was raised by Terrell and his aides. Most of them remain on the preserve, although some drift to the forests and brush lands of adjoining counties.

Barnard Students Adopt Meal Tax To Aid Jobless

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Tax of a cent a meal for unemployment relief has been self-imposed upon Barnard College students.

Dorothy Kramm, chairman of the fund, said:

"If 1,000 girls eat three meals a day for 30 days, and pay their penny taxes, we shall have close to $1,000 at the end of November. We haven't decided yet where the money will go."

There will be no technicalities under which the tax may be evaded, she explained. Meals to be taxed are both intra and extra-mural. Teas, sodas and other extra "eats" will count as meals.

5 HUNTERS DIE IN PLANE CRASH

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 2.—(INS.)—Five men were dead today as the result of an airplane crash in the Cascade Mountains, two miles west of the summit of Snoqualmie Pass. The men, all of Seattle, were returning from a hunting trip in Eastern Washington when the accident occurred.

The dead: John Blum, pilot; Dr. Russell J. McCurdy, president of the King County Medical Society; Arthur D. Hoge, president of the Hoge Piston and Ring Company; Ray Sutherland and Harold De Spain, salesmen for a real estate company.

Observers reported the plane was flying dangerously low near Snoqualmie Pass, presumably because of the fog, which had settled over the summit. The plane crashed near the Sunset highway.

COOK, BRITISH MINE HEAD, DIES

LONDON, Nov. 2.—(INS.)—Arthur James Cook, 46, secretary of the Miners Federation of Great Britain and one of England's outstanding labor leaders, died today at a hospital here after a month's illness.

Cook went to jail in 1918 and 1921, when he clashed with the authorities over his conduct of mine strikes. In 1925 he became known as "Emperor Cook" when he urged labor organizations to adopt extreme measures in enforcing demands for wage increases, especially in the coal mines.

Born in Somerset, the son of a soldier, Cook worked as an underground miner for 21 years before he rose to power as a labor leader. He was a member of the general council of the Trade Union Congress, and served on three government coal commissions. He was also the author of a number of books and pamphlets on labor problems.

Coney Island Slayers Of Policeman Sought

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(INS.)—Intensive hunt was under way today for a dozen men who beat and kicked to death patrolman Howard L. Peterson, married and father of six young children, when he tried to serve a summons upon a taxi driver, after the machine had run into his own auto.

With Joseph Meagher and Edward Hickman, his brothers-in-law, and Miss Rita Hyland, the patrolman was driving the girl to her Brooklyn home after a party in Coney Island. He was off duty and in civilian clothes.

Takes Good Eyes To Insult What's Left of Navy

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

We know what a man is doing when he is not doing anything.

But what does a committee do when it's doing it?

President Hoover threatens to appoint another of those neutral huddles.

The reason? Somebody has slurred the glorious U. S. Navy. And no man can do that and live without paying taxes.

The man who can insult what's left of the Navy must certainly have good eyes.

So a committee will be organized to stir the clam chowder up and grab the big pieces on the bottom.

What is a committee?

MAN RETURNING FROM PARTY KILLED

2 Officers Removing Body On Library Road Struck, Driver Injured Seriously

Crashing into a patrol wagon into which police were placing the body of a hit and run victim early yesterday on the Library road, John Zimmerman, of 1419 Woodbourne avenue, Brookline, was removed to Mercy Hospital in a serious condition, police reported. Two patrolmen, August Schaub, of 436 Overbrook boulevard, and Charles O'Donnell, of 1916 Freeport avenue, also injured in the crash, were removed to Mercy Hospital. O'Donnell was treated for injuries and taken home.

Robert Smith, 29, of Castle Shannon, the victim, was killed in a hit and run accident on the Library road while returning with a friend, Thomas Waddell, 16, of Castle Shannon, from a Halloween celebration at South Park. Waddell, also injured, was taken to South Side Hospital before the arrival of the police patrol.

The two patrolmen were placing Smith in the wagon when the automobile driven by Zimmerman came on at high speed, according to the officers, and crashed into the side of the patrol. Schaub suffered injuries to the back and left leg, and O'Donnell was found to be suffering from a wrenched ankle.

Smith was pronounced dead at Mercy Hospital.

WEALTHY MAN'S DEATH PUZZLES

MAUSTON, Wis., Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Whether Philip A. Koehring, 55, wealthy Milwaukee manufacturer, was slain or committed suicide near here Saturday while driving homeward from St. Paul, was puzzling investigators today.

Evidence supporting either cause for his death has been found, officials said, since his body, with a bullet wound in the head, was found in Koehring's coupe which had crashed through a fence and rolled about 200 feet off the highway into a field east of here.

Subsequent investigation has intensified the mystery of a motive for either murder or suicide. While relatives and business associates of Koehring told authorities he apparently had no cause for worry, the Sheriff and Prosecutor said a check of his movements indicated he had been restless and dejected recently.

The belief that Koehring suffered a skull fracture from a blow delivered prior to his being shot originally gave impetus to the search for a supposed slayer.

WELLSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Mrs. Bessie Wilson, 40, shot and wounded herself near the heart today shortly before she was to appear in court for arraignment on a charge of taking $3,000 from Harry Bowman, a lodger in her home. She was taken to a hospital at Wheeling.

The situation was brought about by the pruning of $7,000 last February from the school budget.

ARMY THREAT IN BRIDGE WAR

KANSAS CITY, Kans., Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Gov. W. H. Murray's representatives were told pointblank today by Federal Judge John C. Pollock that the regular army is bigger than the Oklahoma National Guard which the militant state executive has called out again in the Red River bridge war.

Interrupting a hearing on a petition of the Red River Bridge Company for an order to close the Denison-Durant free bridge, which Murray opened to traffic last summer under martial law, and to prevent the State of Oklahoma from interfering with the company's parallel toll span, Judge Pollock said emphatically:

"The state militia is not bigger than the regular army. I know of one case in Oklahoma where the regular army was called out. It can be done again."

MAN ACCUSED OF MESSENGER HOLDUP PLOT

Arrest Follows Drug Order With Request to Send Out Change; Others Victimized

A scheme to rob druggists, by intercepting errand boys, was believed frustrated last night when Harry Hughes, of West North avenue, was arrested by James Morton, a city patrolman, near the latter's home, 117 Bausman street.

Suspicious when he was asked to deliver a prescription to Morton's home with change for a $10 note, H. F. Schwartz, a druggist, of Knox avenue, followed the suspect. He informed Morton, and the officer made the arrest after following Hughes in his automobile.

Police say the scheme has been carried out by a man taking orders to druggists, asking them to send change to specified addresses. Messengers have been stopped and robbed.

PIERCE SUNKEN SHIP FOR GOLD

BREST, France, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—A hole large enough to permit extraction of gold estimated at $5,000,000 was cut in the main deck of the sunken liner Egypt yesterday by divers from the salvage ship Artiglio II. They went down 125 meters below the surface several times to do the job.

Provided the sea remains calm, nothing now seems to stand in the way of hoisting the treasure.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 2.—(INS.)—Treasure valued at $130,000 in gold, and silver bullion and coins that went down with the liner Colombia September 13 off Point Tosca, Lower California, was salvaged Saturday. The tug Homer, which recovered the treasure, told of the feat by radio. Divers blasted a hole in the steel side of the vessel and made their way to the ship's strong room.

PASTOR BLAMES WORLD'S ILLS ON GREED

Need of Masses While Few Enjoy Luxury Threatens Civilization, Dr. Kerr Says

In his sermon yesterday at the Shadyside Presbyterian Church, Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr said if all the resentment and bitterness in the world were assembled, 90 per cent of it would bear upon property.

Dr. Kerr said:

"This is why the world is saying 'Speak to my brother that he divide the inheritance.' The world is saying just that. There is bitterness and resentment because there is plenty and there is want. There is luxury and there is a bread line. There are little children riding in limousines and there are little children asking for bread. There is accumulated wealth and there is poverty and there are those who are saying to the church, 'Speak to me that they divide their inheritance.' And they follow with a threat that if the church cannot do this thing, if it cannot solve the inequalities of our social order, then it is goodbye to the church."

Our BIRTHDAY

was last week and we still want to talk about it

We hope you'll forgive us for being a little boastful, but we were 72 last week, and we're still enjoying the glow of our anniversary sale.

Not that we are in the birthday business. There are 52 weeks in a year and over 1200 items in a grocery store. And we've built our name and fame on our week-in and week-out low prices and on the quality of those 1200 or so food items.

We do like to make a fuss over our birthday, but we're in the business of keeping the price of good food low every week in the year.

CANNED GOODS BEING STORED FOR RELIEF

Activities Here Greatest In U. S.; Distribution Up To Organized Charities

After many weeks of canning activities by the Surplus for the Needy Association, more than a quarter million cans of fruit and veegtables are being packed in cartons and transferred to the Terminal Warehouse, Carson street, to be stored until distribution.

The transfer marks the culmination of what is considered the largest campaign in the United States to preserve surplus foods for the poor this winter. The produce was collected from farms within 60 miles of Pittsburgh by volunteer workers.

All activities and most of the materials used in the project were donated by Pittsburgh individuals and organizations. The only expenditures, according to Attorney Harry I. Miller, chairman, were incurred for the purchase of sugar and for the payment of freight on empty cans donated.

Distribution will be made by organized Pittsburgh charities.

PRIZE PAINTING HELD TRUE TO LIFE

Dr. MacGowan Declares 'Suicide in Costume' Tells Disillusionment of Today

The much debated prize painting of the Carnegie International Art Exhibition, "Suicide in Costume," was defended as a true interpretation of the age by the Rev. Dr. Robert MacGowan, of the Bellefield Presbyterian Church, last night in his sermon on "My Impression of the Art Exhibit." He said:

"Every true artist is a seer, an interpreter of the age in which he lives. He can see the truth more clearly than any other. This man has seen our age and has put it in a picture.

"The suicide represents disillusionment, loss of faith in himself, in human nature, in God, in the fundamental good of life.

"Is this a correct interpretation of our age? It seems to me that it is—economic, mental and spiritual suicide. It is that mess into which we have fallen."

BIRTH CONTROL CLINICS URGED BY CLARK

Movement Gaining in U. S., Lecturer Says; Los Angeles Experiment Saving Lives

Additional clinics for the spread of information to needy cases is the greatest need in the birth control movement, Dr. Percy L. Clark, Jr., of the Illinois Social Hygiene Council, today declared before a luncheon of the Birth Control League of Allegheny County in Kaufmann's dining room.

The movement is gradually being accepted by the better thinking class and its growth is increasing to the extent that a municipality has established clinics, he said. Clark formerly taught social sciences at Cornell University and is now a staff worker of the Illinois League under direction of Dr. Rachel Yarros. He speaks late today on "Courtship and Marriage" at the University of Pittsburgh's Heinz House and tonight at the Downtown Y. M. C. A.

Citing the increase of clinics, Dr. Clark said:

"The Public Health Department of the county of Los Angeles today operates a number of clinics on birth control for those who need the information and find difficulty in obtaining it. Clinics are a safeguard to prevent the spread of harmful information by commercial clinics and other questionable sources. Clinics are necessary to prevent illegal practices that medical opinion conservatively estimates cause the death of 15,000 to 20,000 women yearly."

Married Women Happier in End Than Single Ones

Is a bachelor girl, with her freedom and fun, luckier than the married woman who's "chained to four walls and a couple of kids?"

Dona thought she was. And proceeded to practice what she preached.

"Why on earth should I tie myself down to a husband?" she snorted, when her friends told her she was only living half a life. "I have a marvelous job . . . a good salary, a fine future and a clever apartment, all my own. And I'm happy. I don't feel the need of anything else!"

But Cousin Sue'n Aunt Betty and the bride next door were persistent. "You'll regret it some day!" they persisted.

So Dona asked us what we thought. Weren't they wrong?

"Dear Miss Martin:

"May I add a line to your interesting answer to Dona, the Bachelor Girl, who claims she's perfectly happy single and can't see any reason for encumbering herself with a husband?

"What a girl! It is fortunate, indeed, that such unnatural specimens are rare. What would become of the world and the race, if all women measured life by such low and material standards? What a selfish view to take of life!

"I will admit that I once took that view myself. But I have learned better. Your advice to her was splendid, but I just had to add a few lines from personal experience to try to convince women that, despite such weak arguments as Dona offers, marriage is and always will be, the real, true and natural environment of every normal woman.

ENVIED FRIENDS

"I tried the Bachelor Girl way of living . . . and for a while I thought it was great. I went where I pleased, did what I pleased, and thought I was happy. I had a fine position, loads of friends and a swell apartment, together with many other attractions, just as Dona has.

"I passed up several offers of marriage in the 12 years that I worked because I felt that I was already well enough off. But at the age of 40 I found myself drifting into terrible loneliness. I would visit married friends, and envy them their homes, children and adoring husbands. Then I thought what a fool I had been.

"But at 41 love came to me . . . and I didn't pass it up as I had the other times. I knew better.

"The man was just two years my senior. Old fogies to be in love maybe . . . but both in dead earnest about it, and both convinced that it would bring us great happiness—and it has.

THANKFUL NOW

"We have a cozy little home and three lovely children, and every day of my life I thank the Providence that taught me to end my loneliness before it was too late. And I know now that I didn't know what happiness was back in those days when I thought I was so free and smart.

"I hope my story will help to make Dona, and others like her, realize that a life alone, no matter how much money and freedom there is in it, can never be half so happy or so satisfying as being a wife and a mother . . . as feeling you are loved and needed by someone you love . . . something I came near not realizing until too late. MYRNA."

And I hope so, too, Myrna, my dear. For that is one of the truest things that any mortal ever said.

No life, no matter how much "success" it can point to . . . no matter how much "freedom" it may have, or how much money can ever be sufficient unto itself.

And finding that out too late is one of the greatest tragedies any life can know.

Fay King Lays Sleeplessness and Nervousness to Too Much Brain Activity

By FAY KING

Any doctor will tell you that mental exhaustion is ten times worse than physical exhaustion.

It is from overexertion of the brain that nervous breakdowns come.

The weary laborer can fall into a reviving sound sleep during his noon hour rest and awake refreshed. But the tired brain worker has difficulty in wooing sleep, and it is sleep that renews our energies more than anything else.

Sleeplessness seems to have become somewhat of an epidemic these days. Many blame it upon the noise.

But I think too much brain activity is the main cause. There is too little relaxation.

Listening in to radios all day. Working a crossword puzzle in every idle moment. Playing bridge until bedtime.

All too brain wearying.

Madge Starts for Town to Stop Bickett Letter

As the disappointed wail from Junior and Roderick came down to us, Dicky glanced up, saw the perilous angle at which they were leaning from the upper hall casement window and went into action.

"Get back from that window this instant," he commanded sternly, and the little boys, used to obedience, drew back, though reluctantly.

"Good. Now kneel down and look out. You can see and hear us just as well, and you won't be landing down here on our heads."

"But, Dad," Junior's voice quavered when they had obeyed, "are they going without us?"

I saw Bill's glance flicker over Hank's face, and the younger lad spoke quickly in a low voice.

"Let 'em come, Uncle Dicky. I—I didn't mean what I said last night. It's all right with me."

"That's all right, Hank." Dicky's voice was delicately balanced between approval and cynical raillery. "It's nice of you to reconsider, but the decision to keep them home wasn't because of what you said at all. It simply isn't possible to take them this time for reasons which will be explained to you this morning. Oh! boys," raising his voice, and looking up at the window from which the two small faces had suddenly disappeared. "Oh! ho!"

With a little tug at my heart, I guessed where the two small figures were—prone on the hall floor in an agony of disappointment. But when Junior's face reluctantly appeared in the window again, there was no trace of tears upon it, although it was unusually red and his voice was distinctly quavering as he asked respectfully "Wha-what is it, Dad?"

"Can you and Rod help me with the horses today?" Dicky asked as gravely as if he were taking counsel of my father. "Jim's so busy he hasn't time to exercise them, and they ought to be ridden."

"Rod! Rod!" Junior turned from the window in such great excitement that he forgot to answer his father. "Rod! C'mon back. Dad isn't going fishing. He's going to ride the horses, 'n' he wants us to help him. Hurry u-up."

He appeared in the window again, his plea evidently successful and answered his father's question.

"Can we help you? Just watch us! Oh, boy! if that isn't the cat's! Go on fishing!" He addressed the departing party scornfully. "Who wants to go fishing if they can ride."

"I agree with you perfectly, Junior," Mary assured him. "Unfortunately we haven't been offered a choice. Don't fall off more than three times, remember. You're allowed three falls."

"Ho!" Junior swaggered. "I never fall off. Don't you forget to bring back some bottle fish for supper. And don't say they aren't biting, for Jerry caught lots yesterday, didn't you, Jerry?"

"You bet." Jerry grinned widely as he waved his hand to Junior from the back of the car where he had perched himself after the rest were seated. "I'll see they all work."

"Sit tight, everybody," Harry Underwood commanded and the next minute the waving hands were out of sight and the chattering, excited voices could no longer be heard. Roderick had rejoined Junior at the window and the two small freckled faces were fairly glowing with joyous excitement.

"Get dressed quickly and come down to your breakfast," I counseled.

"Oh! Mums, do we have to eat breakfast before we ride?" Junior asked, but it was so perfunctory a request that Lillian, Dicky and I laughed as he made it.

"The everlasting 'stall,'" Dicky said with a grin. "Well! he 'comes honestly by it,' as Mother says. I was an accomplished staller at his age."

"Make it present tense, and cut out the last three words," Lillian suggested slyly, then dodged his lunge at her and went into the kitchen, sending a warning summons back.

"Don't you smell the bacon? If I were Katie I wouldn't give you any, dawdling around like that."

"Come along, old dear," Dicky clipped me comfortably under the elbow and we went into breakfast. Junior and Roderick raced down presently, so excited over the prospect of riding that they could only be induced to eat by threat of "no cereal, no horses." Katherine came down directly after the boys, and when she saw me frowned portentously.

"What are you doing out so early?" she said. "You're supposed to have your breakfast in your room."

"I had to get her out this morning to do something very necessary for me," Lillian said, saving me the falsehood. "But she's promised to go to bed as soon as she gets back."

"Well! if she does," Katherine conceded reluctantly and I escaped to the car which Jim had brought around for me. A glance at my wrist watch told me that I would have ample time to get to Southampton where I intended to telephone, because the operators there were not so familiar with my voice or name as were the local girls. But when I had gone perhaps a quarter of a mile on my way, an explosive sound and a wabbling wheel told me that I had tire trouble.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Blonde babies will find that blue mascara on the eyelashes doesn't make such a bold face as when black or deep brown is used. Tisn't a bright blue like those first eye shadows that we played with which threw blue dust in our eyes and messed up the face generally. The new. They are effective.

Not much nail biting goes on these days, but occasionally a beauty waller is heard from. It is a horrid habit, a menace to the health since germs like to tuck themselves away in nail eaves. If cuticle is kept in order, there will be no inclination to nibble. At the finger ends are sensitive nerves which incite one to bite one's nails and also to twiddle one's fingers. Both habits can be corrected.

Only the foolish women will plunge suddenly and violently into a state of muscle training. Gals who haven't been accustomed to exercise, should go at calesthenics slowly. At the first sensation of fatigue they should rest. Muscles that haven't been made to work kick up a protest when put in training. Walking, swimming, rowing, tennis, golf are all good. Though one must ever keep in mind the importance of posture.

If the beauty candidate would have tan and freckles shuffle off, she can't economize on cold cream, but should use it generously on face, neck, arms and hands. Lemon juice is a good whitener, but leaves the skin with a starched feeling, so an oily preparation should follow its application. A few drops of simple tincture of benzoin in the rinsing water—after soap-washing the hands—will help bleach the epidermis.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Fruit, Vegetable Juices Supplement Baby's Diet

In this series I am attempting to give the young mother advice about how to feed her baby. I hope your particular baby may have the benefits of breast feeding. There can be no doubt that that child is blessed indeed if it is fed from its mother's breast.

Dr. Copeland

Milk is the most precious of human foods. At the same time it can become a virulent poison. Unless it is pure to begin with and properly kept, it will soon deteriorate into a harmful mess. This is a good thing for adults to remember, and certainly the mother of a new-born babe should never forget it.

In the cities it is possible to get what is known as "certified milk" or "pasteurized milk." In the country, good milk from a nearby farmer can be procured. But I don't care how pure the milk is in the beginning, unless it is properly kept, it will spoil to a degree that makes it improper food for an infant, or even for a sensitive adult.

There is much discussion about whether or not pasteurization lessens the food value of the milk. Personally, I do not believe it does. The only question involved is whether or not the vitamins are damaged in the process of pasteurization, as they are perhaps when the milk is boiled.

The particular vitamin which may be damaged by heat is Vitamin C. This is the element which has to do with growth. It helps to build good teeth. It does away with the danger of scurvy.

In this connection, when I speak about "scurvy," I do not mean the old-fashioned scurvy they used to have in poorhouses, prisons and aboard ship. That was a dreadful scourge. The scurvy I am speaking about is much less marked, but nevertheless it is a condition we wish to avoid.

Many children are listless, lackadaisical, lacking in energy, apparently lazy. Many a child of school age has been punished because of his lack of attention. As a matter of fact, the poor youngster may be the victim of what we may call "hidden scurvy." He cannot apply himself to his studies because his poor, undernourished brain won't work. In all probability there is a serious lack of Vitamin C in his diet. If good milk, or raw fruit is given him, his unpleasant symptoms will disappear.

Of course, I do not mean to intimate that a baby can be given raw fruit, but even an infant can be given fruit juice, like orange juice or the juice of tomatoes. The older child can be given raw cabbage, turnips, carrots, tomatoes and the various citrus fruits.

FEEDING BABY

This is the fourth of a series of eight articles on Infant Feeding by Dr. Royal S. Copeland. Clipped and saved these articles, in which Dr. Copeland discusses every phase of this vital problem, will complete a comprehensive source of information for mothers.

If there is any question about the pasteurization of the milk harming its food value, it is because this important Vitamin C has been damaged. As I said, personally, I do not believe that pasteurization has this effect, but if there is the slightest doubt about it, the giving of the orange juice or tomato juice will supply all the baby needs of Vitamin C.

The value of pasteurization is so great that I am confident city mothers will make a mistake not to use pasteurized milk. By the addition of the fruit or vegetable juice the deficiency, if there actually is any, will be overcome.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Buffet Dinner

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A girl friend of mine is having a birthday party on her sixteenth birthday. A thinks that she should have the guests seated around the table and then serve.

B thinks that this is suited more for little people and that she should have a buffet dinner, serving sandwiches and other refreshments.

Can you suggest something better? MICKEY.

Either form of service is correct, and it depends entirely on the convenience to the household whether there is a sit-down supper or a buffet service. Of course the reason why a buffet service is so popular is that it permits of having more guests, and the service is simpler.

Candles at Luncheon?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it correct and good taste to burn candles at a luncheon?

2. When serving punch, do you put the long spoon in the glass or beside the silver?

3. Then should it be left in the glass while drinking as you do at a soda fountain, or do you take it out of the glass and put it on the table? G.

1. No, we should not use candles on our luncheon table unless we absolutely need them for light.

2. The spoon may be placed at the place when we are setting the table, with the other silverware. Or, if we wish, we may place the spoon on the plate that should be placed under the glass.

3. Do not leave the spoon in the glass while you are drinking punch. Place the spoon on the under-plate.

Cover Charges

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In the advertisement of some hotels regarding their dances on the roofs, I find such phrases as "cover charge per couple $1.50," or "No cover charge for Dinner Guests." Will you please explain these to me? READER.

This means that guests who have dined in the hotel dining-room and who wish to stay on, for the after dinner dancing and perhaps for supper will not be taxed the cover charge that will be added to the check for guests who arrive for the dancing and supper. It is quite customary for a cover charge to be assigned to guests who arrive at, say, 10 or 11, and some hotels do not make this charge to their dinner guests, as an added inducement, obviously, to guests to dine in the hotel.

Farewell Letter

A very dear friend is going away on quite a long journey. As it will be impossible for me to bid her farewell personally, I contemplate writing her a farewell letter. Just how should I word such a letter? I have never written a farewell letter before. H.

In this letter chat with your friend about your hope for the happiness of her trip and make the rest of the letter an informal chat such as you would write in any other kind of letter. If you have been to the places where she is going, then, of course, it would be natural for you to write her of your experience there and to make some suggestions as to what she would probably enjoy seeing there and doing there.

Contract Bridge -:-

OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

Opening Leads

Ability to make the opening lead is the strongest weapon possessed by the defenders. Often the fate of a contract depends upon what senior leads. If junior had not bid, the player at declarer's left must make a blind lead. If fortunate enough to hold high cards in sequence he should lead the highest one, except in one instance. Leading against a trump make the ace followed by the king definitely announces that the leader has no more of that suit and is prepared to trump a return lead. The king followed by the ace shows that he holds smaller [illegible] of the suit, but that he does not hold the queen. If he holds K-Q, either with or without the ace, senior must lead the suit unless [illegible] by the queen. The fact that he wins both tricks is sufficient evidence that he also has [illegible].

As a rule, a trump makes the lead of a queen, jack holding either ace or king, lack lead denies holding [illegible] of the three higher honors. Cards lower than the jack are non-committal; sometimes the 10 or any lower card is led as the middle of three from Q-10-X, or a lower card, like the 9, may come from J-9-X; ordinarily a card like a 10, or some other that cannot be a fourth-best, is led as a singleton, as the top of a doubleton, or as the top of a trebleton. Such leads merely show inability to lead a suit headed by trick takers.

Against trump makes fourth-best cards may be led from suits headed by cards not higher than the queen. The chief object of such leads is to inform partner that you are leading from a long suit; sometimes the value of the card led conveys valuable information to partner concerning the number of the suit held by the declarer and what top cards he possesses.

Against trump makes a defender cannot expect to win more than two tricks in a solid suit. In case his suit is not solid he is lucky to win one trick. With such restricted chances of winning defensive tricks senior must be as careful not to assist the declarer as Harry Lauder is supposed to be about wasting his money. Never blindly open a suit headed by either ace or king without the other high honor. Do not blindly open tenace suit (A-Q, K-J). Wait for some other player to lead towards your tenaces and single high honors. Blindly laying down an ace more often than not costs your side a trick. If you lead an ace you will have worthless cards played upon it, but if you save your ace you probably will kill a high honor.

The above hints will enable you to avoid most of the common errors of blind leads.

Household Hints

[illegible] of salt in the water [illegible]ing colored clothes [illegible]y prevent the colors [illegible]ing.

It will lengthen the life of the phonograph spring if the machine is allowed to run down every now and then.

Keep your gas stove immaculately clean. A stove in need of cleaning will often cause a disagreeable odor to permeate the house.

A few bits of lemon peel added to stewed prunes before putting them into the oven will make a big difference to the flavor.

Try making orange and grape-juice frappe—mix together one cupful of sugar, two cupfuls grape-juice, one cupful of orange juice, one-fourth cupful of lemon juice, one cupful of cream; fill mold and pack with salt and ice; serve with whipped cream.

CHILD need REGULATING?

CASTORIA WILL STRAIGHTEN HER OUT

Of course you are particular about the medicines you give your child. You want no harmful drugs, no narcotics in a child's medicine.

When your child needs regulating, remember this: the organs of babies and children are delicate. Little bowels must be gently urged—never forced.

That's why Castoria is used by so many doctors and mothers. It is specially made for children's ailments. It contains nothing that can harm a child's tender organs.

Castoria is so mild you can safely give it to a young infant to ease colic pains. Yet, gentle as it is, it is unfailingly effective. Larger doses keep older children well regulated. And babies and children alike love its taste—never object to taking Castoria!

The next time your child has a little cold or fever, or a digestive upset, give him the help of Castoria, the children's remedy. The genuine Castoria always has the name, Chas. H. Fletcher, on the package.

Chas. H. Fletcher.

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT

Don't let a Cold Settle in your Intestines!

KEEP your bowels open during a cold. Only a doctor knows the importance of this. Trust a doctor to know best how it can be done.

That's why Syrup Pepsin is such a marvelous help during colds. It is the prescription of a family doctor who specialized in bowel troubles. The discomfort of colds is always lessened when it is used; your system is kept free from the phlegm, mucus and acid wastes. The cold is "broken up" easily.

Whenever the bowels need opening, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sure to do the work. It does not gripe or sicken; but its action is thorough. It carries off all the souring waste and poisons; helps your bowels to help themselves.

Take a spoonful as soon as a cold starts, or the next time coated tongue, bad breath, or a bilious, headachy, gassy condition warns of constipation. Give it to the children during colds or whenever they're feverish, cross or upset. It is harmless; contains only laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other helpful ingredients.

The way it tastes and the way it acts have made Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin the largest selling laxative in all drugstores!

have a Clear Skin—

rich, red blood cells will help you . . . .

"I WAS determined to have a clear skin."

"Some one told me of S.S.S. . . . now I am so glad the last pimple is gone."

Whenever bad complexion or blemishes on the skin are due to a low blood count, or to a lagging appetite, the condition can be relieved or benefited by a course of S.S.S.

If you are pale, or languid, give S.S.S. a trial. It may help you as it has helped thousands of others.

Its successful record of over 100 years in restoring strength and vitality to the blood surely warrants your giving it a good trial.

Builds Sturdy Health

Why you should be interested in your Blood Count

(Left) Microscopic view of healthy red-blood-cells. The blood stream should contain about 5,000,000 of these cells to the cubic millimeter. They carry nourishment and oxygen to every part of the body—they also remove impurities from the tissues.

(Right) Weak red-blood-cells—only 60 per cent of normal strength—they lack the power to resist infection and disease or to rebuild flesh and to carry away the impurities. Such a condition is often responsible for body weakness, paleness, sallow complexion, pimples and boils.

Don't let them count you out!

BANK PAYMENT RULING ASKED

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—J. Lawrence Wetherill, Philadelphia attorney, said today he has placed before Attorney General William A. Schnader the argument that the State Banking Department has no authority to withhold liquidation payments from depositors in closed banks who also are stockholders.

The contention was prompted by a statement by Dr. William D. Gordon, State Banking Superintendent, that liquidtaion dividends would not be paid to stockholders, persons who are surety for notes and others who might owe money to the bank, when such persons also are depositors until after all depositors had been paid.

The letter written to the Attorney General by Wetherill argues that the liability of a stockholder for an assessment is a second liability and that it is not formally shown that a liability exists until all money has been distributed.

Wetherill represents several stockholders in the closed Aldine Trust Company.

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

THE PITTSBURGH Symphony broadcast yesterday aptly characterized as a renaissance by Mrs. William Maclay Hall was a little more than that so far as our radio stations are concerned.

Never before had a local studio reverberated to anything as scintillating, anything as inspiring as the one hour recital under the direction of Antonio Modarelli . . . Modarelli's exuberance of imagination was beautifully manifest in the co-ordination of 90 skilled musicians.

Neither Goossens nor Stokowski could have criticized much in the way he wielded the baton.

the strings took pizzicato passages with superb grace. French horns rivaled Thor in timely fortissimo as this youthful conductor blended tones with the skill of a Seyffert blending pigments . . . It was a gorgeous exhibition, colorful, arresting, astounding in its magnitude of expression. The program was "network" and demonstrated that Pittsburgh has musicians as talented and versatile as anywhere and as such should receive greater moral and financial support from citizens . . . After hearing the three movements from Tschaikowsky's "Sixth Symphony" and particularly the delightful interpretation of the Allegro con grazia" we vowed to encourage a Sunday radio series by this organization.

Why not?

New York has its Philharmonic, Philadelphia its Stokowski, Chicago its Civic Opera Company, and Cleveland its Walter Logan—all on the networks—but Pittsburgh, the builder of cities, has nothing. Why not have the Pittsburgh Symphony play over NBC or CBS every Sunday afternoon? . . . Soon we would educate the nation to think as highly of our schools, our parks, our cultural refinements as they think now of our mills . . . And for that first concert let the Pittsburgh Symphony "go to town" on Grainger's "Shepherd's Hey" the way they did yesterday!

The Loudspeaker — By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Broadcasters are outdoing themselves in their programs for the benefit of Hoover's unemployment relief committee. Their first program two weeks ago was one of the most brilliant that has yet tumbled from the loudspeakers.

Yesterday, they herded their foremost entertainers in the studios, presented an hour and 15 minutes of superlative vaudeville. So elaborate was their program that they will have difficulty meeting its standard in subsequent broadcasts.

Quickest and surest way of reaching the pocket nerve of the public is through radio. The Hoover committee, realizing it, gained the co-operation of the radio folk. The radio folk wisely confined the major part of their efforts to music. People will listen to music when they generally will turn a deaf ear to talk unless it is enlivened by expert wisecracking—the expert wisecracking, say, of Will Rogers.

Most radio talk continues to come from Washington, though the microphone is still something of a bugaboo to those in the political front line. Frequent visits to the radio have dispelled much of this bugaboo aspect for Hoover. Michophonically, he has become a master of self-possession.

While standing before a crowd of 50,000 persons at Yorktown, facing eight microphones, a gust of wind blew his manscript from the speaking stand. He was forced to wait while his secretary, Theodore Joisin, recovered it.

Unfortunately, in gathering up the sheets of paper, they were shuffled so that when the President began again to read his address, he found the pages transposed. He had to stop again to rearrange the pieces of paper. Never once, Wells Church Columbia's Washington representative, told us, did Hoover lose his composure. He went on as though nothing had happened. And Church adds:

"Few radio speakers could have managed such a difficult situation."

Innumerable public figures still speak into the microphone in the same manner they would before an audience in a public hall. The effect is sad or funny according to the viewpoint of the listener. Saddened listeners quickly turn the dial. Those looking for amusement keep it on, get many a guffaw from old-style spellbinding.

Hours of gargling wasted while bad breath lingers on

We've made a breath taking discovery for taking away bad breath (halitosis)

Don't waste dollars on antiseptics that must be used full strength. We've discovered a new antiseptic that, even when diluted with two parts of water, kills germs in 10 seconds.

MILLIONS of garglers wasting their time on weak and ineffective antiseptics. Stop gargling long enough to consider this: If you mix your mouth wash with water—as 3 out of 4 do—you must use one that kills germs when diluted. Then, and only then, have you the right to expect freedom from bad breath—security against offending others.

Now there's a revolutionary antiseptic on the market—Pepsodent Antiseptic. Its formula is a radical advance. It climaxes the best antiseptic study of 50 years. A germ-killing agent is employed unlike those now in use. It makes Pepsodent Antiseptic from 3 to 11 times more powerful in killing germs than other leading mouth antiseptics, depending on which one you use.

Kills germs in 10 seconds diluted with 2 parts of water

That is the startling news in this new discovery. Think! You can mix Pepsodent Antiseptic with 1 or even 2 parts of water, to suit your taste, and it still kills germs in less than 10 seconds. That's where most other leading mouth antiseptics fail. Yet in spite of all that power, Pepsodent Antiseptic is utterly safe when used full strength. What a weapon this new antiseptic is in fighting bad breath!

SORE THROAT COLDS

Pepsodent Antiseptic does double duty when fighting bad breath. For at the same time it combats colds and throat irritations. Remember P. A. is 3 to 11 times more powerful in killing germs than other leading mouth antiseptics . . . and it kills germs when diluted.

New security against bad breath (Halitosis)

Pepsodent Antiseptic checks bad breath 1 to 2 hours longer! That's Pepsodent Antiseptic's record in fighting this widespread social offense due to unhygienic mouth conditions. Immediately after use, 95% of germs on mouth surfaces are destroyed. Two hours later the number of germs is still reduced by 80%. That is far longer acting than other leading mouth antiseptics. And remember when you use Pepsodent Antiseptic to check bad breath you are doing double duty by also fighting colds.

$3 worth for $1—regardless of size

To kill germs—most mouth antiseptics must be used full strength. So to mix such antiseptics with water is a waste of money. Contrariwise, Pepsodent Antiseptic can be mixed with twice its own volume of water. Thus Pepsodent Antiseptic goes 3 times as far—saves you $2 for every $1 you spend. Pepsodent Antiseptic comes in 3 sizes: 3 ounces for 25 cents—7 ounces for 50 cents—16 ounces for $1. The larger the size the more for your money.

Checking bad breath and combating colds are only two uses for this remarkable antiseptic. There are scores of other uses. Some are listed on this page. Learn to rely on Pepsodent Antiseptic whenever a safe, effective germ-killing agent is required. Keep it in the home. Take it with you when you travel.

Again we say: Quit being good to germs. They've laughed at you long enough. Play safe. Buy an antiseptic that really kills germs when diluted. Remember: You can fool yourself but you can't fool bad breath.

Some of the 50 different uses for this modern antiseptic

Throat Irritations
Voice Hoarseness
Bad Breath
Cold Sores
Canker Sores
Mouth Irritations
After Extractions
After Shaving
Minor Cuts
Blisters
Loose Dandruff

CARNEGIE SPIRIT FLAMES IN DEFEAT

IT'S EASY ENOUGH, only natural in fact, to keep trying your hardest when there's a possibility of getting somewhere. Then you've got a goal to reach, a prize to win, a reward to reap—something to draw you on. But it takes a whole lot more than par spirit, a whole lot more than ordinary courage and determination, and a whole lot more than an average heart to keep fighting to the end when it's written in the books that you haven't got a chance. That's what brought Carnegie Tech out of the 19-to-0 defeat at Notre Dame's hands Saturday with almost as much glory as was due the victors.

Marchy Schwartz

The game itself speedily proved what the advance dope had indicated—that the Schenley Park lads, in a year of ebbing football fortunes, were no match for the peerless Marchy Schwartz and the galaxy of stars surrounding him. But that didn't teaze the Skibos. They gave everything they had all the way to the finish; there was never a sign of letting down or giving up, even after they had lost Lib Lewis with a broken leg, and they went right on to the last ditch with as much fervor and zeal as if a victory had been in sight for them. It was one of the gamest exhibitions ever seen in football, a display of spirit characteristic of the school. Carnegie may be beaten on occasions, like every other team, but never through lack of a heart.

THE SPLENDID FIGHT put up by the Tartans only serves to emphasize the greatness of the Notre Dame team. So powerful was the South Bend opposition in beating Carnegie for the seventh time in nine games that the Plaid's gallant battle was made wholly a defensive one. Only once did the Steffenites have the ball in Notre Dame territory, that being early in the game on a fumble, and even then they could not advance it deeper than the 38-yard line.

That the present Irish team is as great as that of 1930, Pittsburghers are unwilling to admit, judging only by what was shown here Saturday. There was not the same smoothness or finesse in running off the plays, there was not the same zip or precision. Possibly there was just a little offishness in mental pitch, a suggestion of tiredness, which is not to be wondered at, with a specially pointed for faced every Saturday and never a chance for a letdown.

BUT FOR ALL that Notre Dame still looks like the last word in football, a team that is as clean as it is strong, and one that gives you more entertainment and keeps you on your toes in thrilled expectancy to a greater extent than any other attraction on anybody's schedule.

And as for individual stars, the Irish have possibly the greatest halfback in the land in Marchy Schwartz. It was said he might not be so good without Marty Brill's blocking. But if anything he's even better than 1930 punting and passing like a master in addition to being a marvel as ball carrier. Schwartz may have an equal somewhere, but he can't have any superiors.

EVIDENCE OF THE rare defensive power of Notre Dame is contained in the fact that Carnegie Tech was unable to score, this being the first blank for the Tartans in 18 games, or since those same Irish shut them out, 7 to 0, on October 26, 1929. The Scots own a rare scoring record, by the way. One week before the Notre Dame game in 1929 W. & J. held them to a scoreless tie, but those two games and the one of last Saturday were the only contests in which the Skibos failed to score in a string of 44 events since the 6-to-0 defeat at New York U.'s hands on November 6, 1926.

CARNEGIE FINDS ITSELF in its favorite spot this week with the annual Pitt game coming up Saturday. The dope has been that the Panthers, strong enough to crush Penn State 41 to 6 through using only one regular, should win this game, and win it handily, and nothing could suit Carnegie better than to have the encounter viewed in that light.

Stuart Dueger

Tartan coaches and players only hope that the members of the Pitt squad and coaching staff feel the same way about it. For it's when the Scots are such decided underdogs that they rise to their greatest heights. They are set for one big shot this year, and it may be that the Panthers are to be the target.

WHEN THE MODERN series between the local schools was resumed, the Plaid won, not so much because it had the greater team as because it possessed individual stars who could rise to the occasion.

Jimmy Robertson, Lloyd Yoder, Bill Donohue, Dike Beede, Howard Harpster and others all came through in a sensational manner at different times to defeat the Blue and Gold.

AND THIS YEAR, despite the fact that there appears to be no outstanding Pitt weakness except a tendency to be lax on forward-pass defense, the Skibos have several individual performers who are apt to turn the same trick. Two fine halfbacks in Capt. Murray Armentrout and George Kavel, and a sure-handed, accurately-passing quarterback in Stuart Dueger, make up a trio that is likely to cause the Panthers plenty of trouble, even against such stars as Ralph Daugherty, Jim MacMurdo and Paul Collins on the line and Warren Heller and Paul Reider in the backfield.

IT WON'T BE surprising if the Carnegie defense takes a sudden brace. Duke Ducanis, always a good center, may utilize the occasion to win a place among the line heroes in Plaid history, as may also Don Fletcher, husky tackle. Those two may make Daugherty and MacMurdo play their hardest.

And if they do, the Pittsburgh football public will be treated to some rare line play. Out in South Bend they are still talking about the brilliant work of Daugherty and MacMurdo, while he did not play the entire game, was rated by the opposing Notre Dame players above Marvel, of Northwestern.

THE SMALLER BOXING clubs in New York have asked for a reduction in the fees of officials. Referees are paid $50, judges $25 and physicians $25 at clubs where the receipts do not exceed $7,500. Beyond the latter figure up to receipts of $15,000, the referee receives $75 and the judges $25 each.

Barney Dreyfuss

At clubs where the receipts amount to $15,000 or more, the referee gets $100 and the judges $50 each. The physician's fee remains unchanged. In championship matches, the referee receives $200 and the judges $100 each. The small clubs regard the rates as exhorbitant in view of existing conditions and have asked for a revision downward.

THE RETURN OF President Barney Dreyfuss today from his vacation means the beginning of the real maneuvering for a new Pirate manager. The Buc owner still insists that his mind is open on the matter to make any announcement. But of course he won't wait until that date to get busy on the job. In the meantime he's got to weigh the relative merits of all the eligibles and after he has made a selection there will remain the matter of signing his man if the latter happens to be the property of one of the other clubs.

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

Sammy Dorfman of New York and Ray Collins of Erie will box the 10-round windup at Motor Square Garden tonight, and not Mose Butch and Frankie Wallace, as originally arranged, it was announced today by the Garden management.

Mose Butch

The switch was made when Dorfman and his trainer, Ray Arcel, came into town yesterday ahead of Sol Gold, manager of Dorfman and Jack (Kid) Berg, and announced that Dorfman would not box in a subordinate position on the card. Rather than risk a last-minute mixup, the club communicated its desire to switch the order of its two 10-round bouts to the boxing commission and received permission to do so.

Meanwhile Butch and his friends and his manager, Jack London, were protesting the move and there was a threat that the popular local Italian might adopt a stand similar to that of Dorfman and refuse to budge out of the windup spot.

BETTER BALANCED BOUT

Butch's argument is a strong one. He has beaten Jackie Rodgers and Johnny Datto in his last two starts here, both windups, and his opponent, Wallace, who hails from Cleveland, also has beaten both Rodgers and Datto, and the latter pair boxed three times to large gates at the Garden last winter. Also, Butch and Wallace appear to be much better matched than Dorfman and Collins. Collins does not stack up as a formidable opponent for the Jewish lightweight, who has won decisions over Eddie Brannon and Johnny Jadich in bouts at the Meyers Bowl during the recent outdoor season. Standing alone as a headliner, such a match wouldn't draw a corporal's guard to the Garden, while Butch has a large and enthusiastic local following.

Strengthening Butch's stand is the fact that he and Wallace originally were signed with the understanding that they would be appearing in a main bout. Later the club decided to bolster the card and at the same time take care of Dorfman, who was to box Battling Gizzy, of Donora, on the same date. Gizzy was not ready for the match, so the club decided to kill two birds with one stone and honor the Dorfman contract by using him to back up the Butch battle. Now Dorfman comes in for what virtually amounts to an exhibition with an ordinary opponent and claims and steals the limelight away from a rising young local boxer, who is expected to draw the crowd and deserves a better break.

OLD AMATEUR RIVALS

Anyway, unless a further hitch develops, Dorfman will go through with his bout in the prima donna role, and Mose will semi-final it with Wallace, whom he met three times as an amateur, twice in Boston and once in Chicago, with Wallace winning two of the bouts. Both won the national junior amateur bantamweight title before turning professional. An eight, a six and a four-round bout make up the preliminary card.

Eddie Brannon boxes Sid Silas, highly-touted young Jewish lightweight, of New York, now making his home here, in the eight-round bout, while Charley Blazevich, of St. Michaels, encounters Jack Thompson, of Warren, O., and the North Side, in the six-round battle, and Petey Johns, of the North Side, and Jimmy Gilligan, of Clairton, meet in the four-round opener at 8:30.

Between Rounds

Maxie Rosenbloom, holder of the world light-heavyweight championship, and Jimmy Braddock, of Jersey City, are signed for a 10-round no-decision bout at Minneapolis Tuesday night or next week.

McNeesport has another double windup offering for Thursday night with Young Corby, of Wheeling, battling Harry Mongiello, of McKeesport, and Leo Kaufcan, of Homestead, Pete, tangling with Johnny Lo, of Johnstown, in the two

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF LAST SATURDAY: OCTOBER 31 IS NOT HALLOWEEN—Halloween, or All Hallow E'en, is the Eve of All Saints' Day. All Saints' Day is a festival established by Pope Boniface IX in the year 609 to commemorate the conversion of the heathen Pantheon in Rome into a Christian Church by leave from the Emperor Phocas. This official consecration took place May 13, 609 and the Pope directed that the anniversary of the day be celebrated henceforth as All Saints' Day. The proper date of All Saints' Eve (Halloween) is therefore May 13, and Halloween was celebrated on that date for many centuries. November 1 was one of the great festivals of the heathen nations of the north. It is assumed that the date of Halloween and of All Saints' Day later were shifted in accordance with the policy of the Roman church.

IRISH TOP TECH; N. Y. U. VICTIM IN UPSET

By JESS CARVER

The hordes of football have taken more or less gracious leave of another October with things pretty well under control. Saturday's contests, with two or three exceptions, went as they were figured; Chick Meehan's New York U. Violets have been whipped; Notre Dame has bounded past the annual Carnegie Tech obstacle; Northwestern has the Big Ten title practically "in," and the campaign may now continue to its ultimate conclusion with the usual mixup of title ratings and with the advent of November, the annual opening of the all-America picking tournament.

Chick Meehan

Here in the tristate district, Pitt, Allegheny, Davis-Elkins and Waynesburg are heading the parade. Carnegie Tech is being congratulated on its fine showing against Notre Dame; West Virginia is wishing the Kansas Aggies had been mixed up in a train wreck; the Dukes are grimacing over the Catholic U. setback and wondering about Holy Cross; Howard Harpster's Geneva Covenanters still are dizzy from being caught in the traffic down at Franklin-Marshall, and West Virginia is whooping it up after holding the Navy even.

POOR MISTER MEEHAN

Poor Chick Meehan! No matter how good the Violets look, they annually manage to blow up and drop a ball game. One year it was Georgetown that nailed the Meehan hopes; another time, Oregon Aggies turned the trick and last Saturday, a belittled Oregon eleven knocked the New Yorkers right off their own back yard.

Notre Dame, I thought, carved out a very workman-like victory over Carnegie Tech. Not only were the Tartans blanked, but they were kept back in their own territory all afternoon save for three plays in the first period. Marchy Schwartz again demonstrated that he is the best left halfback in the game and the Irish line continued to live up to all the nice things that have been said and written about it.

TARTANS GAME

The Tartans put up a game fight, though, and evidenced a surprisingly strong secondary defense. The line was O. K. at times, but was not consistent, and when Marchy and Leahy and Sheeketski were in there, Notre Dame was able to gain ground just about at will. Tech figures to make trouble for Pitt, but hardly can be expected to take the Panthers, especially since the team has been weakened by the loss of Lib Lewis, who is lying out in Montefiore Hospital with a broken right leg.

Pitt, employing only second, third and fourth stringers, ran up a huge score on Penn State and, after the game was over, sent the varsity out to run through signal practice. Coach Sutherland's charges capitalized on State fumbles early in the game and had 27 points before the Lions found out the game was on.

D.-E. STILL GOING

Davis-Elkins kept its record clear and its goal line uncrossed by walloping Georgia State, Westminster gave Waynesburg an unexpectedly hard tussle; Thiel beat St. Vincent and Bethany broke into the victory column for the first time in a couple of years by whipping Fairmont Teachers.

Had Maud Crum's Allegheny team beaten Grove City, the Gaitors practically would be set as Class B champs, but Charley Berry had his Crimson team up for the game and held the favored Meadville club even. Geneva was trounced by Franklin-Marshall, but the Covenanters had to play minus the services of Art Grahame and Buck Nelle. St. Francis took one squarely on the lug from the United States Coast Guard. West Virginia Wesleyan with Cliff Battles perched on the sidelines, played sterling defensiv

DREYFUSS BACK HOME TODAY

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Due to return to his home late today after an extended vacation in Atlantic City and New York, have something tangible to say Barney Dreyfuss, Pirate owner, may concerning the all-important local baseball question, to wit: "Who is to be the next Pirate manager?"

The Pittsburgh magnate went to the eastern seashore with the idea of forgetting baseball. He succeeded in getting fine health benefits, but he did not succeed in the incognito trick—the baseball official was recognized by many of the game's subjects where'er he journeyed and in several instances the gentlemen of the press descended upon him in considerable force, they prodding him with questions regarding the managerial matter.

When Dreyfuss left Pittsburgh more than two weeks ago he stated quite clearly that he did not know the identity of the next manager of his club. In his weeks of relaxation he may have considered the question and it may be he has something definite in view. But naturally he will not commit himself in this direction until he is ready to make the real announcement. Such a thing could happen this week and it may not be decided before the winter meetings of the baseball men scheduled for next month.

DEVINE WELL LIKED

So far many prominent baseball men have been put forth as candidates. Among those mentioned in the long list were Wilbert Robinson, Frank Frisch, Walter Maranville, Otis Crandall, Pie Traynor, Art Griggs, Carleton Molesworth, Joe Devine, George Gibson and Joe Schultz.

Gibson was reported to have held the pole position for some time, but just before he left for the East, Dreyfuss declared em-

FIVE JACKETS ON BLOCK

By CARL W. SHATTO

Five members of the 1930-31 Yellow Jackets, Pittsburgh's representatives in the International Hockey League, today were placed on the block as Coach Charles Reid continued negotiations for four more new skate and stick stars.

Duke McCurry, Mickey McGuire, Leo Reise and Roger Smith, all veterans, and Lloyd McIntyre are the skaters who did not receive invitations to report here for another season of campaigning. They will either be sold or used as trading material.

Smith and Reise are defense men, and McCurry, McIntyre and McGuire are forwards. McIntyre still has many years of hockey ahead of him, but he is a rather frail lad, and Coach Reid feared that he would not be able to stand up under the International League's rough milling.

Coach Reid began his rebuilding program by signing Ty Arbour, former Pittsburgh left wing who has been with the Chicago National Leaguers in recent seasons. Four additional new performers will be signed by the Jackets within two days, Reid said, and will be available for service when the Jackets open their competitive season by meeting the Chicago Hawks, runners-up for the National League championship last season, in the first of a two-game series at Duquesne Garden Saturday night.

The jacket skaters' invasion of Pittsburgh began in earnest today, and by tomorrow Coach Reid expects to have a full squad with which to work. The players recalled, many of whom now are in the city, and the others en route here, are: Goalie, Albie Cox; defense men, Art Berlett, Gordy Fraser, Joe Matte and Whitey Fields; right wings, Capt. Tory Gregg and Tex White; left wings, Cam Proudlock, Milt Halliday and Ty Arbour, and centers, Eddie Rodden and Eddie Ouellette.

Tickets for the first Jackets-Hawks game Saturday were to be placed on sale at the Garden at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The second game of the series will be played on Tuesday, November 10, and the Syracuse Stars will come here to open the International League season on Thursday, November 12.

THREE-CUSHION PLAY BEGINS

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—(INS.)—Sixty-five players will chalk up their cues today in four major sections of the country to compete in elimination tournaments for the national three-cushion title.

The survivors of the four sectionals will meet, beginning November 10, and the four finalists will qualify for the world championship match, early next year.

Charles A. Jordan, Los Angeles, the 1929-30 western champion, will not compete this season, because of illness.

In the northern section no seeded players are listed. Arthur Thurnblad, 1930 northern champion, who won the world crown, is automatically qualified. Clarence Jackson, Detroit, runner-up, will be absent.

In the East two seeded players, F. S. Scoville, Buffalo, the 1930 eastern king, and Alfredo De Oro, runner-up, will enter. In the South D. I. Jacob, last year's southern champ, will be out.

The eastern sectional meet will be held at Buffalo, and in New York City, with the playoff November 10.

The northern section contests will be in Akron, O., for the eastern division.

The J. P. Rooneys came another notch nearer their second West Penn Gridiron Conference championship yesterday by beating the McKeesport Olympics, 6 to 0, at Olympia Park. In the other Conference battle, East Liverpool walloped West View, 12 to 0.

A large crowd watched the Olympics battle the Rooneys. The Olympics today are suffering from injuries. On the lone touchdown play, Halpate suffered a broken shoulder bone, and Kaletz, who had been out with a broken finger, injured it again. In the final period, Goldberg, who was playing a fine game, also was taken from the game.

HALPATE INJURED

In the second quarter Jimmy Rooney punted from his 20-yard line to the Olympic 9-yard line, where the ball went out of bounds. The first play gained a yard, and Halpate was hurt. The Olympics then suffered a five-yard penalty for their fourth time out.

On the next play Halpate fell back to kick, but he evidently had not recovered from his injury, and a fumbled low pass was fell on by Honey Guarino for a touchdown.

East Liverpool, with five new faces, showed splendidly against West View. The Pottery outfit scored in the second period, Sheppard taking the ball. In the final period Scheffer went over.

East Liverpool is likely to give Burns plenty to worry over at Parnassus Wednesday. The feature game of Sunday will find West View clashing with Art Rooney's champions.

The Latrobe Independents scored a 13-to-7 victory over the Mount Pleasant griders, at Latrobe.

Kilbane was featherweight champion and Coulon bantamweight champion. Clabby was a leading contender for the middleweight title. Dunn was Kilbane's manager. McCarthy was the outstanding white hope and appeared destined to be the man to defeat Jack Johnson, Negro holder of the heavyweight crown, while McCarney was his manager.

Dunn and McCarney still are managing boxers, the latter being associated in the handling of Max Schmeling, the current heavyweight champion. Kilbane is a referee in Cleveland and Coulon a promoter of amateur bouts in Chicago.

McCarthy died in the ring during a bout with Arthur Pelky at Calgary shortly after the picture was taken. Clabby recently drifted into Chicago stone "broke" and looking for any sort of a job.

Of them all, Ketchel, a dynamic personality and colorful fighter and puncher, is best remembered. He was one of the ring greats of all time, and, because he died at the very peak of his career, he always will be remembered as he was when death came, while his contemporaries lost caste carrying on while on the downgrade.

Ketchel's life was a short and rip-roaring, hilarious one. So was McCarthy's. To contrast them with Clabby's longer span and its drab concluding chapter is but to emphasize the vagaries and caprices of a fickle Fate.—HARRY KECK.

WARNER SAYS RESERVES ARE MISJUDGED

WEEK-END PICKS

Southern California should defeat Stanford.

Oregon State will defeat Montana.

Santa Clara will beat Loyola and St. Mary's should defeat the Olympic Club.

By GLENN S. WARNER

(Rec. U. S. Patent Office.)

A great many people, including bleacher coaches and sports writers, have an idea that teams with large squads and a large number of substitutes have a decided advantage over opponents with a lesser number of reserves. The argument is made that when a coach has a large squad of players he can change the personnel of the team on the field by frequent substitutions and thus keep fresh men in the lineup throughout the game and wear down a team which cannot make so many substitutions.

We hear and read that in the coming game between Ballyhoo and Softpedal the Ballyhoo team likely will win because they have a wealth of reserve material and that Coach Bozo can throw in almost a fresh team at the beginning of each quarter. I will admit that any coach should have at least one good replacement man for each position so that he can substitute a man for a player who happens to become injured or exhausted. The facts are that the tougher the game the fewer substitutes are used. It is only when a coach sees that his team has a safe lead, or is hopelessly beaten, that he runs in a lot of his reserves. He does this, not to strengthen his team or to relieve exhausted players, but to give his reserves some deserved recognition and experience which will be valuable to them in the future, or perhaps he does it to also save his regulars for an important game the following Saturday.

POINT-A-MINUTE TEAM

Some coaches delight in running up large scores on their opponents and try to make high scoring records and keep their best players in the game as long as possible.

I recall the "point-a-minute" team of Coach Yost, of Michigan, which 30 years ago ran roughshod over all opponents, thus gaining the above name. I took the Carlisle Indians to Detroit to play that team. The Indians had an off-year that season and were much weaker than usual. Harvard had beaten us, 29 to 0, the previous week in 20-minute halves instead of the regular 35-minute periods. It was the custom in those days to shorten the halves by mutual agreement in early-season games.

We had to play Pennsylvania the Saturday following the Michigan game and that was considered Carlisle's most important game. That being the case, I decided to sacrifice the Michigan game and do the best we could with a substitute team, since many of my regulars were injured in the Harvard contest. I left many of the regulars at home and we went to Detroit with a greatly weakened team. To make matters worse, the two halfbacks I had intended to start deserted the team the morning of the game and beat it for their western reservations.

YOSTMEN HELD LOW

I explained all of these facts to Yost and asked that he do as Harvard had done and agree to shorten the halves, this being an early-season game. His reply was that the rules provided for 35-minute halves and that was what we would have to play. However, the Michigan team did not make a point a minute in that game, in spite of the Indians' unusually weakened condition. They scored only 22 points in the 70 minutes of play.

With National and West Penn cup games and a few league games run off yesterday soccer fans certainly had a big day of it.

Morgan, minus the services of Buff Donnelli, had little trouble hurdling Cecil in the National amateur cup, winning by a 6-to-2 score.

In a West Penn cup game, Curry outplayed the Pittsburgh Celtics to win, 3 goals to 0. Kirk scored, Brown kicked through his own goal and then Mike Bookie let loose 15 yards out to score the third. Gallatin traveled to Bridgeville to win, 1 to 0, while Manown put Reviock out of the tourney, 2 goal to 0.

In the Panhandle League, Heidelburg beat South View, 4 goals to 1; the Bridgeville Owls topped Beadling, 2 goals to 0. Sturgeon swamped Cuddy, 5 to 1. Gladden entertained Primrose and nosed them out, 4 to 3. Moon Run tripped Grove, 1 goal to 0, and the J. J. Veronas, flashing fine form, stopped the Scotts, 3 to 0.

SCHOOL RACE CLOSE

By JULIUS LEVIN

Last week's contests in the Western Pennsylvania scholastic football race proved a disastrous one for undefeated elevens, no less than six of them being numbered among the casualties recorded in Friday's and Saturday's gridiron battles.

As a result of the wholesale elimination of contenders for the W. P. I. A. L. championship only three sections now have representatives surviving in the titular competition.

Clairton, McKeesport and Washington are the contenders from the Monongahela Valley, Midland is the sole survivor in the Beaver Valley, while New Kensington paces the field in the Allegheny Valley, quite a reduction when it is taken into consideration that two weeks ago no less than 22 teams were undefeated.

LOCAL TEAMS BEATEN

Local fans saw their last two championship contenders eliminated from the race Saturday when Wilkinsburg and Peabody suffered their first defeats of the season. Wilkinsburg succumbed at the hands of Hank Day's undefeated Little Presidents, of Washington High 21-0, in Washington, while Peabody suffered its initial setback in a battle with the powerful Donora High machine, 18-0, at Donora. Donora's triumph did not come as a surprise as the Monongahela Valley team has been improving with each game. Just a week ago it defeated Charleroi, 20-7. Only one team has beaten this club, California, which met its own Waterloo Friday night at the hands of Charleroi, 12-8, turning the trick, 13-7.

Clairton once more added prestige to its claim to the championship by the thorough manner in which it inflicted the first defeat on Earl Lourks' powerful Greensburg eleven at Greensburg. George Woodman's team, displaying the same power that has characterized every one of its games this season, swamped the heretofore undefeated Brown and White machine under an avalanche of touchdowns to win by a 29-0 count. It was the third straight undefeated team to fall by the wayside in games with Clairton, Woodman's team previously having eliminated Charleroi and Monongahela.

Midland, Coach Rusty Lomond's Beaver Valley contender, found Rochester a tough opponent, but managed to score a 13-0 victory for its seventh straight triumph. Midland still is unscored on.

New Kensington, Carl Glock's smooth-working grid machine, was extended to the limit to score a 12-7 victory over Tarentum. The Glockmen apparently took things too easy as Tarentum had failed to score a point in its first five games. New Kensington's triumph was its sixth in succession.

AMBRIDGE TIED

As was anticipated by close followers of scholastic football in the Beaver Valley, Aliquippa proved a tartar for Ambridge and as a result the battle waged by these two clubs ended in a scoreless deadlock.

Beaver, after going through five games without meeting a defeat, saw its record broken Saturday by New Brighton in a free-scoring contest. Beaver dropped a 20-13 decision to its valley rivals. Prior to that contest a tie with Coraopolis was the only blemish on the Beaver record.

Ted Rosenzweig's Vandergrift eleven suffered its first setback on Friday night, losing to Erie East, 20-0. The defeat not only broke Vandergrift's winning streak, but marked the first points scored on the Rosenzweig eleven this year.

TUBERS WIN SIXTH

McKeesport, Bill Sullivan's championship hope, continued its fine march by adding West Newton to its list of victims. The Tubers copped their sixth straight victory by a score of 39-0. No team has scored on McKeesport this season. The Tubers, however, face their hardest test of the season this weekend when they invade New Castle.

Sharon, by scoring its sixth straight victory of the season at the expense of Sharpsville, 32-0, clinched the honors in the Mercer County race. Greenville is the only team to score on Sharon this season, registering seven points in the opening game of the season.

Altoona scored its seventh straight victory Saturday by defeating Johnstown, while Freeport made it seven in a row by defeating Kittanning on Friday.

More than 20 schools will attend a meeting at the Fort Pitt Hotel at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon to organize a Class AA football conference in the W. P. I. A. L.

Cochran and Hoppe Here for Cue Duel

Cochrane and Hoppe will spend this week meeting all comers in exhibition matches at the Ueberle Parlors, 3817 Forbes street, and the William Penn Parlors. These practice jousts will be played each evening, and the visiting stars will play 18.1 while their opponents are playing the easier 18.2 game.

The title match, of 3,600 points, will be played in blocks of 300 points, the first next Monday afternoon.

ST. MARY'S UNBEATEN

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—St. Mary's rallying game put on a brilliant field yesterday and defeated their keenest rivals, Santa Clara, 21 to 14, to maintain their record of the only undefeated, untied major eleven on the Pacific Coast this season. Three Santa Clara stars, Vic O'Donnell, Joe Fazio and Charles Fuller were badly injured. They were taken to a hospital.

The Coach's Viewpoint

By Howard Harpster

Howard Harpster

Recently, I was asked which phase of football was the most important for the success of a good offense, and numbered among the possible choices were forward passing, blocking, line bucks, off-tackle plays, end runs, kicking, etc. Of course, a good running attack includes all of the above mentioned arts, but if one is more important than any of the others I believe it is blocking.

Everything in offensive football depends upon blocking, and the degree of success that any team's offense enjoys depends upon the skill and effectiveness with which the players of that team are able to block. By blocking we mean getting the defensive players out of the way so that the ball carrier will have a chance to get past them without being tackled. Sometimes it is only necessary to stay in front of the defensive player. At other times, the offensive men must knock the opponents off their feet or "ride" them out of the way by charging them with their bodies and shoulders. Regardless of which method is used, each has the same point in mind, and that is to clear a path through the defensive team. Blocking also is very important on forward passes and kicks, as it gives the passer and kicker sufficient time to get the ball off.

The greatest blocking team in the country undoubtedly is Notre Dame. To my mind, there are several reasons why the Irish are the leaders in this department of the game. In the first place, I believe that because Notre Dame's offense calls for speed rather than power, the Irish more than any others must depend upon good blocking if their offense is to be successful. As a result, the Notre Dame coaches very likely spend more time developing expert blockers than do other coaches.

Another reason, and one which probably is more nearly correct, is that each player on the Notre Dame team knows that if he isn't blocking properly and, as a result, is missing his man, there are a half dozen other players sitting on the bench who are almost as good as he is, and who have been waiting for many weeks to get into the game and show the coach how hard they can hit the opponents. As a result, the players at Notre Dame make up their minds that they are going to get their opponents out of the way on each play, for, if they don't, they know very well there are some boys on the bench who will, and that they soon will be changing places with some of them.

As blocking is very much "mental," it is easy to understand why a large squad is likely to have better blockers than a small one. A player on a small squad may be a poor blocker and still be on the team because there may not be anyone to take his place, but on a squad where there are a large number of players the boys either block or they don't play.

PACKERS LEAD PRO LEAGUE

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—The Green Bay Packers, champions of the National Professional Football League, moved into undisputed possession of first place in the 1931 race yesterday by trimming the Chicago Bears, 6 to 2, before 30,000 spectators.

The Packers scored in the second period when Michaelski intercepted a pass thrown by Brumbaugh, Bear quarterback, from the Green Bay 25-yard line, and ran 65 yards for the only touchdown.

FRIEDMAN STARS

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Benny Friedman, who has spent most of the current season teaching Yale's young footballers how to toss forward passes, returned to the professional game yesterday to lead the New York Giants to a 14-to-0 victory over the Portsmouth Spartans in a National League game.

NEVERS SHINES

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—The Chicago Cardinals whipped the Brooklyn Dodgers, 14-7, in a National League game yesterday. Ernie Nevers figured in the scoring of both Chicago touchdowns.

U. S., FINLAND EVEN

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—The United States gained an even break at four-all with Finland in their two-day amateur boxing tournament completed last night. Steve Sakas, Boston 175-pounder, defeated Vaseva and Harry Burke, Boston 112-pounder, outpointed Suokman. Koivunen, of Finland, however, stopped Joe Meham, Kansas City, 175-pounder in the first round. Finland had taken a 3-1 lead Saturday.

TILDEN, HUNTER SPLIT

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—William T. Tilden and Francis T. Hunter, American tennis stars, broke even in their singles exhibition matches against German players yesterday. Tilden defeated Roman Najuch, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4, but Hans Nussbaum defeated Hunter, 6-2, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2. Tilden, Najuch and Nussbaum defeated Karel Kozalch and Albert Burke, members of the Tilden troupe, 6-4, 6-4.

STUART BREAKS LEG

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Johnny Stuart, manager of the Huntington Boosters in the Middle Atlantic League and manager and quarterback of the Huntington Business Men's Association football team, suffered a broken leg in a football contest between the Huntington club and the Ashland (Ky.) Armcos yesterday. Ashland won, 18-0.

BUSH, D. & E. LEAD SCORING IN EAST

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Louis Bush, the Massachusetts State sophomore, and Argus Winters, ace of the high scoring Davis and Elkins team, continued their race for eastern individual football scoring honors last week. Scoring all his team's points in a 13-12 triumph over Amherst, Bush brought his total to 96 for the season and increased his margin over Winters by one point.

Bob Garbark, of Allegheny, and Bob Campiglio, of West Liberty, both were held scoreless, but retained the next two places on the list with 78 and 72 points, respectively.

phatically that the Canuck had no more chance than the others; in fact his tone was such as to indicate he had experienced a change of mind concerning the former pilot of the club.

It is quite surprising the number of fans who think Joe Devine, erstwhile scout of the club, stands a good chance to cop the honor job.

Devine, considered one of the best judges of baseball players in the country, resigned his scout job this year to take over the reins of leadership of the Mission club of the Pacific Coast League. This San Francisco entry was almost completely revamped with kid players after Devine took charge and at the finish of the season Joe's club was moving along in an impressive manner.

TIED UP WITH MISSIONS

Pirate officials point out one little fly in the ointment as regards Devine. Joe is declared to have signed a long-term contract with the Missions; in any event it is believed to have been signed for next year. But where a big advancement awaits an athlete his employers often will release him from the obligations of the binding document. It has been done many times in baseball. Moreover, Pirate and Mission officials are quite friendly.

Quite a few followers of the Pittsburgh club interpret Dreyfuss' expressions on Wilbert Robinson as being sympathetic. Quizzed in New York over that angle of the question, Dreyfuss stated he had had no discussions with Uncle Robbie, but he did not say anything tending to eliminate the deposed Brooklyn leader.

Dreyfuss announced on the eve of his vacation that he would take plenty of time in deciding on the man.

Coach Bible Happy As Team Wins, Son Is Born

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 2.—(INS.)—Coach Dana X. Bible, of Nebraska University, has penlty to smile about.

Greasy Neale, who, before the season opened, predicted his team would lose three out of 10 games, watched his Mountaineers drop their fourth as Bo McMillin's Kansas Aggies socked them hip and thigh.

PREXIES BEATEN

Wash-Jeff, bragging early in the fall of its intent to go through unbeaten, lost its second game in as many weeks by being taken, 3-0, by Temple Friday night. With Marquette ahead for this week, it may be three in a row on the wrong side of the ledger for the Prexies.

The Duke line failed to hold up against the hard-hitting backs of Catholic University and the Dukes lost the finad night game of the year. All they have to do this week is to play Holy Cross. The outlook has been brighter.

In the East, Cornell kept rolling right along by upsetting Columbia. Dartmouth and Yale put on a field day with a 33-33 tie and Harvard punched over Virginia. The Army won from Colorado College, with Ray Stecker, the gent Pitt will have to watch here in two weeks, showing the way with two touchdowns. Colgate won again; Holy Cross ruined Brown and Georgetown was beaten by Boston College. Cornell has the best team Ithaca has seen since the days of the Pfmann-Kaw regime, which was some regime.

ILLINOIS, WISCONSIN BOW

Northwestern turned back Illinois, 32-6 in the Big Ten as Minnesota whipped Wisconsin, 14-0; Ohio State conquered Indiana, 13-6 and Purdue beat Chicago, 14-6.

Nebraska and Iowa State turned in Big Six victories, the former over Missouri, 10-7, and the latter over Oklahoma, 13-12. Kansas bowed to Oklahoma A. and M., of the Missouri Valley Conference, 13-7.

In the South, Georgia smashed through Florida, 36-6; Tulane walloped Mississippi A. and M., 59-7, and Tennessee beat Duke, 25-2, in the outstanding Conference games. Alabama nosed out Kentucky, 9-7, and Vanderbilt added to Georgia Tech's woes with a 49-7 decision.

Southern Methodists marched on toward a Southwest title with a 9-7 victory over Texas and Texas Christian disposed of Arkansas, 7-0. Utah showed itself the class of the Rocky Mountain group with a 60-6 victory over the Colorado Aggies.

Washington State nosed out Oregon State, 7-6, in the Pacific Coast Conference, but Stanford was hard pressed to beat back the University of California at Los Angeles, 12-6.

Two supporting bouts, Mateo Osa vs. Ted Sandwina, and Babe Hunt vs. Walter Cobb, are expected to be closed today.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Advance — Local Stocks Stronger

STOCK MARKET BEGINS MONTH CHEERFULLY

Bullish Operations Switch To Oil Shares; Steels Among Issues to Rally

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Securities markets began the new month cheerfully today.

Bonds felt the reinvestment demand resulting from interest, dividend disbursements and maturities paid, amounting to more than $1,000,000,000. Bullish operations in stocks switched to the oils.

Standard Oils of New Jersey and California, Texas Corporation and Prairie Pipe rallied a point or so in fairly active buying. Similar advances appeared in United States Steel, Bethlehem and American Can, while American Telephone at its best was 3 points higher. National Biscuit, Corn Products, Sears Roebuck, North American, Columbian Carbon and Western Union rallied at least 2 points. Case and International Harvester were strong in sympathy with the recent buoyancy of the grain markets. Rails, however, were sluggish.

The bullish activity in the oils was based on firmer crude prices in the mid-continent, and forecasts of higher prices in California. Furthermore, payment of the regular extra dividend of 25 cents by Standard of New Jersey was encouraging.

The week-end reports from the steel trade gave further impetus to the better feeling regarding that industry.

"Steel" predicted that ingot production, now estimated at slightly above 28 per cent of capacity, would reach 30 per cent this week. The motor industry and the railroads are showing renewed interest in steel buying.

Wall stregt was keenly interested in the meeting of heads of railway labor organizations in Washington this week, in view of the New York Central's proposal of a voluntary wage cut of one per cent for one year.

A further slump in foreign exchange rates, particularly the French franc, was regarded as decisive evidence that the panicky inroads upon American monetary gold stocks by foreign interests was definitely at an end. The pound sterling also declined precipitantly, presumably reflecting a withdrawal of support, and an end of security liquidation and withdrawal of funds from this market by London interests.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Grain is pouring out of Montreal elevators at a pace far in excess of last year. The October total of 10,834,401 bushels delivered by the Harbor Commission elevators was more than 2,000,000 bushels over the figure for the corresponding month last year and approximately the same total above the September deliveries.

The total deliveries of 74,000,000 bushels for the first 10 months this year are more than 6,000,000 bushels greater than for the corresponding period in 1930.

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—Consumption of electricity in 5,000 communities served by the Middle West Utilities System is running 6.3 per cent ahead of last year, without including companies acquired during the year, Martin J. Lamont States Real Progress Has Been Made.

—By B. C. FORBES—

THOMAS W. LAMONT, foremost J. P. Morgan & Co. partner, confides to me:

"You must not represent me as expressing Pollyanna stuff. But I do feel distinctly more encouraged because of recent developments. It is hardly conceivable that there are ahead of us events of the seriousness of those already behind us. While we must not, of course, rush to the conclusion that all unpleasantness is set out of the way—while we must expect occasional jolts—nevertheless I personally feel that we are now likely to see the general trend in the right direction.

"The outcome of the British election is of a historic importance and economic significance not apparently sufficiently understood in this country."

B. C. Forbes

This expression from the most influential international banker in America who has all along refrained from talking—and who consented only after persuasion to let me summarize his hopeful views—will carry very important weight throughout the higher reaches of the financial and business world.

LAST WEEK'S chief events were more calculated to impress this country's leaders than the general public. Among the more gratifying were these:

The crushing blow to Socialism in Great Britain and the convincing demonstration that the vast majority of Britons are determined to face their problems and solve them in manly fashion no matter at what self-sacrifice.

The disappearance abroad of silly alarm over this country's financial stability, reflected by the rise in the international value of the American dollar and the subsidence of the European clamor for American gold.

The petering out of hoarding of money in our own country, as illustrated by the $24,000,000 decrease in bank circulation. Although month-end demands may bring a poorer showing this week, the fact remains that hysteria has all but vanished among bank depositors. Therefore, redepositors of hoarded funds is almost certain to outweigh withdrawals.

American bankers are elated over the unexpectedly early repayment by the Bank of England of two-fifths of the $250,000,000 credit granted three months ago by American and French banks.

Wholesale liquidation of American securities by foreign investors has ceased, the expectation now is that there will shortly set in very widespread buying of American investments by other nationals determined to invest part of their wealth in the strongest country in the world.

A return flow of gold to this country in the near future would cause no astonishment.

The epidemic of bank failures is believed to be over. But, sporadic closing of second rate institutions in the largest as well as smaller cities must be looked for.

The half billion dollar National Credit Corporation is at last ready to begin functioning effectively. Moreover, in various cities leading citizens and corporations have banded together to safeguard worthy local banks against any unreasoning runs which may break out.

IN SHORT, as one powerful banker remarked to me at the week-end:

"We now have the situation better in hand than at any time heretofore. Don't raise hopes unduly high lest the untoward occurrences which are bound to crop out here and there cause undue disappointment. We must expect checkered rather than uncheckered recovery — downturns as well as upturns, but with the upturns in the ascendent."

RAILWAY EXECUTIVES are seriously seeking to effect a workable compromise with the Interstate Commerce Commission. They contend that their request that the modest proposed increase in rates be lent by strong roads to weak roads, rather than handed over as a dole, is eminently fair—as, indeed, it is. Hope rather than confidence is entertained by railway managers that their employes will amicably agree to a 10 per cent wage reduction until profits have returned to a reasonable level. It cannot be said that the very grave railway problem has yet been solved. Latest earnings statements are deplorably unsatisfactory.

INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY has not yet made any very substantial progress. As in the case of retail trade, some betterment is noted in certain sections. But, that is all that can be truthfully said.

On the other hand, there has been very pronounced improvement in basic commodity prices, notably in our three most important cash crops, wheat, corn and cotton. Should this rising trend be maintained, the most solid of all foundations will have been laid for expansion in purchasing power.

Banks, Exchanges To Close for Election Day

The New York Stock Exchange, New York Curb, Pittsburgh Stock Exchange and exchanges in other cities will remain closed Tuesday, November 3, election day, a legal holiday in many states. Banks here and in New York will also be closed.

Chicago Board of Trade (Grain Pit) will be open for its customary session.

COTTON STEADY AT ADVANCE

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Cotton opened steady today at an advance of 5 to 6 points on foreign and domestic trade buying, coupled with higher Liverpool cables. Southern selling was in evidence here, but offerings were light with the market steady. January sold up to 6.75c and March to 6.90c.

The advance encountered some southern selling and brokers who frequently act for the co-operative interests were again credited with selling March. This selling was not heavy, but it seemed sufficient to supply the initial demand and checked the advance which was followed by reactions of a few points. Prices sagged off to 6.72c for January and 6.87c for March, and the general market was within a point or two of Saturday's closing quotations at the end of the first half-hour.

Trading continued quiet later in the morning, but offerings were light after the early selling had run its course and there was sufficient further trade buying or covering to send the market about 5 to 7 points net higher, with January selling up to 6.76 and March to 6.88c. Prices sagged back again with the market ruling within 2 or 3 points of Saturday's closing quotations at midday.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 2.—Cotton spot good business done; prices 4 points higher; quotations in pence: American strict good middling 5.84; good middling 5.44; strict middling 5.24; middling 5.09; strict low middling, 4.99; low middling, 4.84; strict good ordinary, 4.64; good ordinary, 4.34. No receipts. Futures closed steady: December, 4.80; January, 4.80; March, 4.85; May, 4.91; July, 4.97; October, 5.04; December, 5.08.

MOVE TO OPEN BANK HERE

Directors of the Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., are making efforts to secure new capital to permit the reopening of the institution, which closed its doors on September 21.

A stockholder of the bank admitted today that a plan is under consideration, but he stated that it is still indefinite. Within the next two weeks directors expect to be able to come to a decision as to the advisability of attempting a reorganization.

Seek Bank Support Of New Credit Plan

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—A move to enlist support of bankers in all sections in a plan to release $1,250,000,000 worth of credit by making finance companies eligible to rediscount at Federal Reserve banks was announced by C. C. Hanch, general manager of the National Association of Finance Companies. Mr. Hanch has asked more than 1,000 finance companies to request that their banks support a petition now pending before the Federal Reserve Board to make so eligible the notes of banks and of finance and credit companies drawn for the purpose of procuring funds for the purchase of installment paper.

National City Bank Sees Improvement

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—The return of public confidence in banking power and credit is seen by the National City Bank of New York as a distinct indication that better times are in the offing.

In its monthly survey of economic and financial conditions, the bank stresses the liquidity of the larger city banks which, it says, possess about 40 per cent of the country's total banking resources and are in such excellent condition that they are enabled to extend valuable assistance to smaller institutions where they can safely do so.

London Exchange Closed for Holiday

The Paris Bourse was closed also.

National Steel to Cover Dividend Requirements

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

NATIONAL STEEL CORPORATION has again published the outstanding quarterly statement of the industry. Most of the leading steel companies showed losses and only a few were able to record small profits. National, however, earned $326,113 after all charges for the three months ended September 30. This was equivalent to 15 cents a share on 2,156,832 shares of capital stock.

Profit was smaller than in the second quarter when earnings were equivalent to 71 cents a share but the ability to earn any profits under the depressed conditions of the past summer has become the mark of exceptionally good steel mill management.

The publication of a quarterly statement was not generally expected at this time since the company is required to make its earnings public only at semi-annual periods in accordance with its agreement with the New York Stock Exchange. Officials of the company believe, however, that the abnormal conditions of the industry made it advisable to give stockholders additional information.

Nine Months Dividend Earned

THE THIRD QUARTER was the first period since the formation of the National Steel Company early in 1930 in which dividend requirements were not fully earned. But net profit of $3,774,610 or $1.75 a share for the first nine months of the year left a margin over dividend requirements for the period.

National is on a $2 annual dividend basis. Profit of $1.75 a share for the first nine months of the year leaves only 25 cents to be earned in the final three months of the year. While this is more than was earned in the third quarter, economies from wage and salary reductions are a factor in current earnings. This indicates that National's earnings for the full year probably will equal or come close to dividend requirements. It will be the only large steel company to accomplish this.

Moderate Gain Shown

A MODERATE INCREASE in steel mill activity has been shown during the past month. The bulk of steel buying has been for rush delivery. While no particularly great change is expected in activity before the close of the year, most steel officials are hopeful that a recovery will start early in 1932. If this develops, the steel companies, with their overhead and operating costs greatly reduced, will be in a position to show greater profits in proportion to their gross business than at any time in the past.

The future activity of the automobile trade will be of particular importance to National Steel since the new plant at Detroit was completed last summer. In spite of the low rate of motor production, exceptionally good results have been secured from the initial operations of the new plant.

Sales of Cigarets And Cards Gain In State

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Cigarets, tobacco and playing cards are three lines of manufactured goods showing improvement this year over 1930 in Pennsylvania.

For the first nine months of 1931, sales of cigarets in Pennsylvania nearly doubled the trade of the same period last year. The sale of playing cards for the quarter ending in September was nearly seven times that of last year.

The government benefitted to the same extent in the collection of excise tax for those articles. Those gains helped offset losses in revenue from taxes on bond and stock transactions as well as cigars.

General Motors Likely To Declare Regular Dividend Wednesday

Action on the next quarterly dividend of General Motors will be taken Wednesday. The meeting of Motors' directors is among the most important, from a stock market angle, on schedule for this week. But consensus is that the G. M. board will order the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share on the common despite the fact that September quarter earnings were equivalent to but 25 cents a share on the stock. Net for the nine months was equal to only $2.08 a share against $2.85 a share in the same period last year when earnings included more than $9,000,000 non-operating profit. But the company's recent statement showed it had materially strengthened its cash and working capital position, presumably through the liquidation of inventories.

A number of other corporations are slated to act on dividends this week. Several Standard Oil units, including Socony-Vacuum, Standard of California and Standard of New Jersey, will probably take action today, and the Coca-Cola board is scheduled to hold its postponed meeting. Tuesday Timken Roller Bearing and Brown Shoe will act, with Remington-Rand due to act on its preferred dividends. On Wednesday Drug Inc., and Federal Light and Traction will act, and on Thursday the National Dairy Products' board and directors of Manhattan Shirt are slated to take action on their dividends.

The rise in wheat from the early October low levels, is estimated to have added some $82,000,000 to the value of wheat remaining on the farms. That is the extent to which the farmer stands to benefit by the rise thus far. It is calculated that approximately 410,000,000 bushels have been marketed from the farms out of a total indicated winter and spring crop of 680,000,000 bushels. This would leave an indicated total of 470,000,000 bushels still on the farms on which the farmer stands to realize the better prices now prevailing.

Because of the average stability of the general food industry, Standard Statistics is of the opinion that shares in this group should be considered largely from the standpoint of conservatism and income return. Stocks favored in this group are Borden, Corn Products, General Foods, Hershey Chocolate, National Biscuit and Standard Brands.

The quiet but persistent strength in wheat which has advanced to new seasonal highs is expected to stimulate speculative interest in the shares of those companies whose fortunes are closely intertwined with the movements of commodity prices. Farm implement and mail order stocks are expected to prove immediately responsive to continued improvement of grain quotations.

In the bull market days of some years ago, the announcement of the issuance of rights to purchase common stock was usually attended by a brisk rise in the issue concerned. Today, just the reverse takes place, as witness Friday's sharp decline in Electric Power and Light on announcement of rights to stockholders.

TRADE OUTLOOK IMPROVES AS PRICES RISE

New Monetary Policies, Banking Relief Factors In Expected Recovery

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—New and imponderable factors have been injected into the economic situation, such as new monetary policies, banking relief at home, the Tory victory in Great Britain, all of which may have profound effect on the course of trade in the future, but in the last week business itself has moved within a narrow range.

Mr Rukeyser

However, sentiment improved notably and was bolstered by an upturn in wheat prices.

Except for retail sales, the time for the seasonal peak has passed without normal autumnal gains.

Check payments are at a low ebb, and in the present abnormal behavior of the public there is a temporary and upsetting trend from a credit to a cash basis. Credit dollars, on account of hoarding and hesitancy on the part of bank depositors, are loafing. If the volume of credit already outstanding were doing its normal work, the opportunities for expansion would be large.

Alert observers are making allowances in their calculations for further deliberate counter-deflationary monetary policies at home.

Installment finance companies have taken advantage of the growing demands for expansion to petition the authorities to make paper arising out of bank advances to finance companies eligible for rediscount at the Federal Reserve. Although technically such paper is not, strictly speaking, self-liquidating, the issue has arisen whether the routine conception could not be broadened in view of the increasingly important role of installment financing in American business. The great need of the future is better to finance consumption, and accordingly it is felt that installment paper should no longer be considered a stepchild of finance. On the technical side, banking objection was expressed a year ago by the Federal Advisory Council.

This broadening of the eligibility rules, it is thought, could be effected without congressional action.

The proposal runs somewhat contrary to conventional banking thought, but, in view of the major failure of banking to serve business satisfactorily, the possibilities of the proposal ought to be fully explored at an impartial hearing.

15c OIL BOOST 'NOT ENOUGH'

TOPEKA, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—An increase of 15 cents a barrel in the price of mid-continent crude oil posted by several oil companies was termed "too small" by Thurman Hill, of the Kansas Public Service Commission, who tonight called upon oil regulatory bodies of Oklahoma and Texas to meet in Tulsa November 30 to consider curtailing production in the three states from 10 to 20 per cent.

TULSA, Okla., Nov. 2.—An announcement of a 15 cent increase in crude oil prices to 65 cents for top grade, electrified the mid-continent oil industry Saturday and brought cheer to the entire Southwest.

The turn came after months of discouragement, and tribulations in seeking a cure for over production. The price advance was made possible largely through an interstate agreement on proration of output, enforced by martial law in East Texas and Oklahoma. The news received a hilarious reception, bands were called out and Halloween was turned into an oil celebration.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 2.—The Stoll Refining Company, has advanced crude oil in its Kentucky Pipe Lines 10 cents a barrel, making the new price 60 cents at well.

Great Western Line Elects President

Charles A. McCulloch, chairman of J. R. Thompson Company was elected director. Arthur W. Cutten, a director of the road, was elected a member of the executive committee.

Commercial Car Registrations Off

DETROIT, Nov. 2.—Complete returns on new commercial car registrations in the United States during September, show 25,967, against 27,070 in August, and 33,933 in September, 1930, according to R. L. Polk & Co.

Treasury Offering $75,000,000 Bills

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The Treasury is offering $75,000,000 91-day bills to be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidder. Proceeds will be used largely for refunding.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Alice Double, who passed away one year ago today, November 2, 1930.

And the ones who think of her today

THE LOVE TRAP -:- Story of a Girl's Struggle For Love and Happiness -:- By ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

CHAPTER X.

Landers left Steve and Mary in the room. He simply strode out, and closed the door behind him. Alone, they faced each other, shaken and disturbed. Humiliation, a tingling sense of shame, burned in Mary's face. Steve was white, his nerves taut.

So far as Mary was concerned, all her connections with Buck Landers were ended—even her position as secretary to the manager of the hotel. But that was not even a minor worry. She could always find employment. Her heart went out to Steve though. His future with Landers was blasted; he had thrown it away gladly for her. What gripped her heart with cold terror was the bloodless threat Landers had made against the youth she loved. Not yet could her mind absorb the deadly menace, but deeper than thought was an instinct of fear for the safety of the loved one. It was precisely as though an actual chill centered in her breast, and was pumping a cold current through her veins.

"We must get out of here," she said suddenly.

"Yes, we're through here," he responded grimly.

Something caught at her heart with an infinite pain of tenderness. She wanted to hold him with his head on her breast as though he were a child—her child, that had been hurt . . .

"It isn't your fault—not a bit of it," she told him valiantly. "He acted horribly. And about the money and all—don't you worry for a minute about that, Steve. We don't need anybody's money."

He squeezed her hand. "I'm not worried about that. I got you into a dirty mess, Mary. It was a rotten thing to do. Come on, we'll get out of here."

AFRAID FOR HIM

They went down on the elevator, their spirits tarnished. She wondered if he realized that Buck Landers was a dangerous man. Those threats . . .

"Steve, I'm afraid."

His gray eyes were steady. "No, you're not afraid, Mary." He smiled. "What is it they say on Broadway? 'Smile and keep the show on.'"

She was not calm, but tried to seem so. "Well, he's not going to panic us, thank heaven," she declared, giving him a little hand squeeze.

"Steve, you've got to get out of town."

"Don't be foolish, Mary!"

"You don't realize how serious this is." They drew aside from the revolving door and lingered momentarily near the entrance of the lounge, off the lobby. "I don't think you realize how tough these people are—people like Mr. Landers. He has men around him that actually are thugs. Gamblers and bad men. Another thing, he said he'd hurt you. When he talks that way I think he means it. You know the papers are always filled up with these gang murders and—"

"Oh, that's nonsense! Buck wouldn't go that far—"

"I tell you, you don't realize—" she began; and then, looking at him with desperate entreaty, "Won't you please listen to my advice, Steve? You're just a little boy—"

TO LEAVE HOTEL

It was a mistake to try to influence him this way. He seemed to lean backward slightly; his face darkened with a kind of resolute stubbornness.

"We'll never get anywhere if we try to govern our conduct by your fears," he told her firmly. "I'm not used to this rough talk of Landers' and neither are you—that's why it seems so dangerous. He's not going to stand between us—remember that. I don't think there will be any trouble. He was angry and we were the cause of it. But nobody is going to bluff us, or run us out of town." Nevertheless, a sudden genuine worry crossed his expression. "The only thing is—but no, nothing can harm you. As long as you're all right, I can look out for myself."

"But if you would only get out of the hotel, Steve."

He nodded. "That's right. I'm through letting Buck pay my bills. It's early yet, and I think I'll go up and pack my stuff right now. You wait here and I'll be down presently, and have a bell boy check the stuff until I decide where to go."

"But don't be long, dear."

"It'll take about 20 minutes."

She found a chair in a shaded corner and, while she waited, her mind went back over their affection since the first meeting—her first impression of him had been that he was lively and humorous—the odd things he said—and the amusing turns of his speech. She could almost remember every word he had uttered to her; but, more vivid than conversation, she saw that they had been touched, from the beginning, with some strange, golden haze that had grown steadily brighter.

And now it was love.

But it was dangerous love—there was more to Buck Landers's threat than empty words. No man of his powerful will and cold-blooded pride was going to swallow humiliation from a stripling like Steve. Maybe Landers didn't love her—but he wanted her . . .

"If you don't mind," said an unexpected voice, "I got some more things to say to you, Mary."

THREATS CONTINUED

She looked up. Landers, sullen but collected, was staring down at her. "I'm terribly disappointed in you, Mary," he went on, seating himself. "You didn't give me a square break, and that puts our whole relationship on a difficult basis. Still, if that's the way you play the game, I'm going to play right along with you. Maybe I had too high an opinion of you—that's why I don't blame you as much as I might. You're not a fool, Mary—and I think you're going to listen to reason. You seem to be stuck on Steve right now. I'm sure you wouldn't want something awfully bad to happen to him, would you?"

"If anything happens to Steve it would kill me," she cried desperately.

He looked at her with hard, remorseless eyes. "As bad as that, eh? Well, it's up to you my girl. Come on up with me to my apartment, and we'll talk this thing out to the end. We'll put all the cards on the table. Don't think this affair is settled just because you and Steve want it to be. I haven't said the last word yet, and if you value Steve, you'll listen to me. If you don't—well, you can blame yourself for whatever happens."

LAST CHANCE

"But I can't. Steve is coming here himself in just a few minutes."

"What does that matter to me?" Landers said, contemptuous of detail. "I want to talk to you alone, and an hour or two either way makes no difference to me. Get rid of Steve—let him take you home—and then come back here. I'm giving him one chance—one last chance, and you hold it in the hollow of your hand. If you think I'm kidding, wait and see. I'll be upstairs the rest of the evening and—it's up to you, Mary. Take it or leave it."

He was not bluffing—he was telling the truth.

"I'm not going to let you hurt Steve!" she said with difficulty, her voice catchy. "Yes, I'll come. Wait in your room. I'll make you see the truth—I'll make you understand that you have no right to interfere with us."

Landers turned, walked away. Mary's word that she would join him later in his apartment, was satisfactory; it was unlike him to squander his speech, or emotion upon anything less than the main issue.

Hope gradually replaced fear as Mary sat in the lobby and waited for Steve to return. She would make every effort to get him away, immediately, from the danger he would inevitably be in were he to remain around the Metropolis Hotel.

STEVE SATISFIED

And then, if all went well—she might mollify Buck Landers. She had misjudged Landers—he was cruel, more vindicative, than she would have supposed. Yet there had, in the past, seemed a streak of kindness in him, too.

"I'll soften his heart," she repeated silently. "No man is all bad . . . there must be a good side to him. He's frightfully angry and jealous now, but I'll show him that he's only making himself unhappy. I'll reason with him like a friend. When he understands how Steve and I love each other, he'll see that he can't expect any happiness with me. He used to be awfully fond of Steve . . . I can't believe he'd hurt him now, and yet . . ."

Nevertheless she was feeling considerable better when Steve joined her in the lounge. It would never do to let him know she was coming back tonight to plead with Landers. Intuitively, knew he would forbid it, and find a way to enforce his prohibition.

Well, I'm all packed and cleared out upstairs," he said. "From now on I'll paddle my own canoe—thank God."

"Am I worth it, Steve?" she asked him, eager to hear his avowal again.

"You're worth all there is, up to and including murder," he told her fervidly. "All my life before I met you was a total loss. I'm the happiest guy on this spherical merry-go-round. And I'm apt to burst into a shower of sparks from sheer joy. That's the effect you have on me, darling! And it's getting worse all the time."

CONCERNED ABOUT SAFETY

She thought she detected, beneath his banter, a note of uncertainty. A sweeping fondness that was a mingling of pity and love drew her closer to him.

"I want you to listen to me, Steve, and do exactly what I tell you," she urged. "Get your bags and we'll ride up to my rooming house in a cab. I know there is a vacant room there that can be had very cheaply. You have some money, haven't you?"

He flushed. "Oh, of course, some——"

"You'll have to live economically for a while, till you get on your feet. I'll take you up to live at my place, and then I'll know you'll be where I can watch over you. We'll be under the same roof, at least. I've got to get you settled some place, and then we can work everything out from there."

"A little while ago," he reminded her, "you told me I'd have to get out of New York. You changed your idea."

"I've been thinking it over and maybe we can figure out a better plan," she said. "Anyway, you'll practically be in hiding at my place. Oh, I know I'm foolish about your safety, Steve, but you're the dearest thing on earth to me, and I don't want to take a single chance. Somehow, I feel wiser than you are. If you leave everything to me, all our troubles will melt away. We mustn't let our minds get pulling in opposite directions, must we?"

He looked at her with an amused, kindly expression. She was no higher than his shoulder, and the serious eagerness on her face went to his head, suddenly, like a strong draught of an intoxicant. A dozen people might have seen him, but he bent his head impulsively and kissed her full on her soft mouth.

"If I was sure I could do everything you want me to do, be everything you want me to be, I'd be darned proud of myself," he told her. "But all this stewing and fretting is silly. We haven't any troubles. We just have to take a few bumps together, and then we'll be set for life. But let's get started for home."

CRAMPED QUARTERS

He called a bell boy, and with his bags deposited in a taxi, they started for Mary's uptown address. She had been correct about the vacant room; the landlady was glad to receive a new roomer, and Steve was stowed away on the floor above Mary. He opened one of the bags and Mary helped him arrange his toilet articles on the dresser; it was a narrow cramped room, but they had a delightful feeling of security.

"I dont believe there's a parlor in the house where we can visit each other," Mary said, "but if we're discreet, I don't think the landlady would object to me coming up here—if I don't stay too long. That's one beautiful thing about New York, Steve—you can do just about what you please, without people nosing into your business."

He looked at her over his shoulder, a bit of a frown on his forehead. "I'm not so keen on the bedroom rendezvous business. If I didn't care so darned much about you, Mary, it wouldn't matter, but you deserve a better break than anything I'm able to give you right now. Maybe you don't know it, but I'm darned conventional. Suppose people in the house find out we visit each other in our rooms—what would they think of you? You're the girl I'm going to marry one of these days, and I don't want any dumbbell in a joint like this to think you're one of the wrong kind. You see what I'm driving at? I don't want to do anything that puts one little spatter of mud on your pretty white frock."

A new measure began to ripple and sparkle through her being. Sweeter than all kisses, dearer than any thrill, was this realization that she was precious and immaculate in his eyes. She had been worried a little, secretly, that he might think her cheap because of her eagerness. It was warmly delicious to know that he understood—that he had not judged her, cynically, upon the harsh basis of her actual conduct; he had understood that she had been in a state that was excited and unnatural. A girl in love might do most anything, and still be a nice girl—but it takes a wonderful wise man—and a gentleman—to understand . . .

UNDERSTANDING

"You're so adorable!" she breathed. Her whole heart was melting at his chivalrous attitude. And he was right! There was something petty and sneaky about hiding away in a furnished room for a love tryst. He was dear enough to foreswear the questionable pleasures; he was generous enough to wait.

"Thank heaven, it's summer," she told him, her eyes liquid with happiness. "We can ride on busses and walk in Central Park and along the drive. Oh, Steve, let's keep it always sweet and precious. All of our lives we'll be looking back on this time together, and we want it to be beautiful, don't we?"

He grinned at her. "That was my idea, darling. I don't mind telling you, you're too seductive for my own comfort. This is our courtship, Mary—and I'm not going to get it mistaken for a honeymoon. You're all right yourself—but I'm not taking any chances on myself. That cave man stuff is all right for other fellows and girls, but, you see, I happen to love you, Mary. That makes it different, doesn't it?"

"Steve," she said, her voice shaking, "I didn't know there was a man on earth like you."

(To Be Continued Tomorrow.)

(Copyright, 1931, King Features Synd., Inc.)

"You don't realize how serious this is. He said he'd hurt you," said Mary.

"I'm sure you wouldn't want something awfully bad to happen to him."

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Mary Kennedy, pretty secretary, becomes engaged to Buck Landers, wealthy sports promoter, who is much older. Later, Mary meets young Steve Moore, Landers' ward. They are attracted to one another immediately. Landers asks Steve to entertain Mary while he is out of town. The bond between the young couple grows, but thoughts of Landers form a barrier. Mary tells Steve she does not want to marry Landers. One evening Steve takes Mary in his arms. Then conscience-stricken, he tells her they must not see each other again. Next day, Landers' former sweetheart calls on Mary and threatens her. Mary longs for Steve, but days pass with no word from him. Finally he comes to say he is going West. She persuades him to stay. They spend the evening together at Landers' hotel. As they exchange love vows, Landers walks in. He is infuriated and assumes a very threatening attitude.

I want every woman to send me, in a plain envelope, her idea of a good time. I will run through these letters and choose the ones that are the most original. Shortly after that you will receive a phone call from me and we will make arrangements for an appointment. Repudiate the Machine!

Barr and McGovern Should Be Elected as County Commissioners.

The primary election did not finally settle the question as to whether or not the corrupt Republican machine shall continue to govern Allegheny County. The machine suffered a setback in the defeat of Joseph G. Armstrong and James J. Coyne in the primary, but it is in the field again with new candidates for County Commissioner.

The people of Allegheny County will best serve themselves by again repudiating the machine in the election tomorrow. They can do so most effectively by electing C. C. McGovern and C. M. Barr as County Commissioners.

In the election of these sturdy and honest independents lies the strongest assurance not only of an audit of the county's financial affairs and honest elections, but also of a business administration. Taxpayers will be interested in Senator Barr's pledge that if elected he will move for a fairer assessment of property.

There are three other independent candidates who should be elected—Bert A. Llewellyn, K. William Schuchman and Bernard L. Flynn, Square Deal nominees for County Director of the Poor. The Republican nominees for these offices—J. Clyde Miller, W. L. Henderson and H. H. Dixon—have been proved unfit by the reports of the board of visitors appointed by Judge Gray to investigate their official conduct.

Do not fail to vote tomorrow.

New Taxation Plans

Pennsylvanians Will Find Plenty to Interest Them in the Legislature's Money-Raising Schemes.

The special session of the Legislature which convenes next week to consider unemployment relief gives promise of being devoted to money-raising schemes.

The money will be collected from the people, and it accordingly behooves everyone to be on the alert to protest against unjust or impractical plans.

Gov. Pinchot is expected to advocate a "prosperity" bond issue of from $20,000,000 to $40,000,000. Inasmuch as such bonds will not be legal until validated by vote of the people, which cannot be had until 1933, the plan seems impractical.

The Governor mentions in his proclamation various other money-raising plans which have more to commend them.

Senator George Woodward is going to propose a state income tax as a permanent revenue-producing measure. Since it will hit the rich hardest, his plan is said to have won strong support.

Representative Richard D. Burns advocates a tax of one-half of one per cent of the annual wage or salary of all persons over 16 years old, with a maximum of $52.

A state tax on cigarets has also been proposed.

Thus it will be seen that schemes are brewing which, if enacted into law, will touch the pocketbook of nearly everyone. The legislators should be given an opportunity to learn what the people think of their plans.

Naval Holiday Menace

League's Plan Threatens Permanent Handicap to U. S. Sea Power, Due to Hoover Regime's Neglect.

The extent of the harm done to the American Navy by the present administration is forcefully brought out by the League of Nations' proposal for a one-year holiday in naval building.

If the administration had done its duty by the country and the Navy, this proposal might be welcomed as a step away from competitive building, and as a measure of economy at a time when public expenditure should be restrained.

As a result, however, of the administration's neglect of and unpatriotic indifference to the national defense, the United States finds itself in a position where a holiday in naval building would fasten upon the country and make permanent a disadvantage in strength that would reduce us to a third class power.

So deaf to all warnings and appeals has been the Hoover administration, that today the United States has less than 55 per cent of its quota of auxiliary naval shipping; whereas the British have completed 80 per cent and the Japanese 84 per cent of the ships fixed by the quotas of the London naval agreement.

The Navy League now declares that to act upon the League of Nations' proposal would not only permanently place us in a disadvantageous position, such as these figures indicate, but it would give Great Britain and Japan an even greater lead over us, as both have, in their diligent efforts to build up to their permitted quotas, begun construction on ships which, notwithstanding the League of Nations' holiday, would be carried to completion.

Senator Swanson, of Virginia, recognizing the precarious plight into which we have fallen through no one's fault but our own, suggests that Great Britain and Japan shall cease naval construction for five years and give us an opportunity, at tortoise pace, to catch up with them.

But even the Senator's suggestion reflects the note of feebleness and fatuity that seems to dominate our naval policy under the Hoover administration.

He perceives that we may have some difficulty in catching up even if Great Britain and Japan stand still, and he develops his proposal by suggesting that Great Britain and Japan, who have so far surpassed us, by availing themselves of the treaty's permissions, should gradually "scrap down" toward a lower level of relative strength than was fixed in the London naval treaty.

The best that can be said for such a proposal is that it is simple and innocent. The practical difficulties of negotiating such a treaty preclude hope of success.

Let the Hoover administration wake up and address itself to its patriotic duty to maintain our naval strength at the agreed quotas.

It should be apparent to even those who having eyes see not, that their betrayal of the Navy has brought us into a lamentable position.

BUILD, BUILD NOW, AND BUILD FAST.

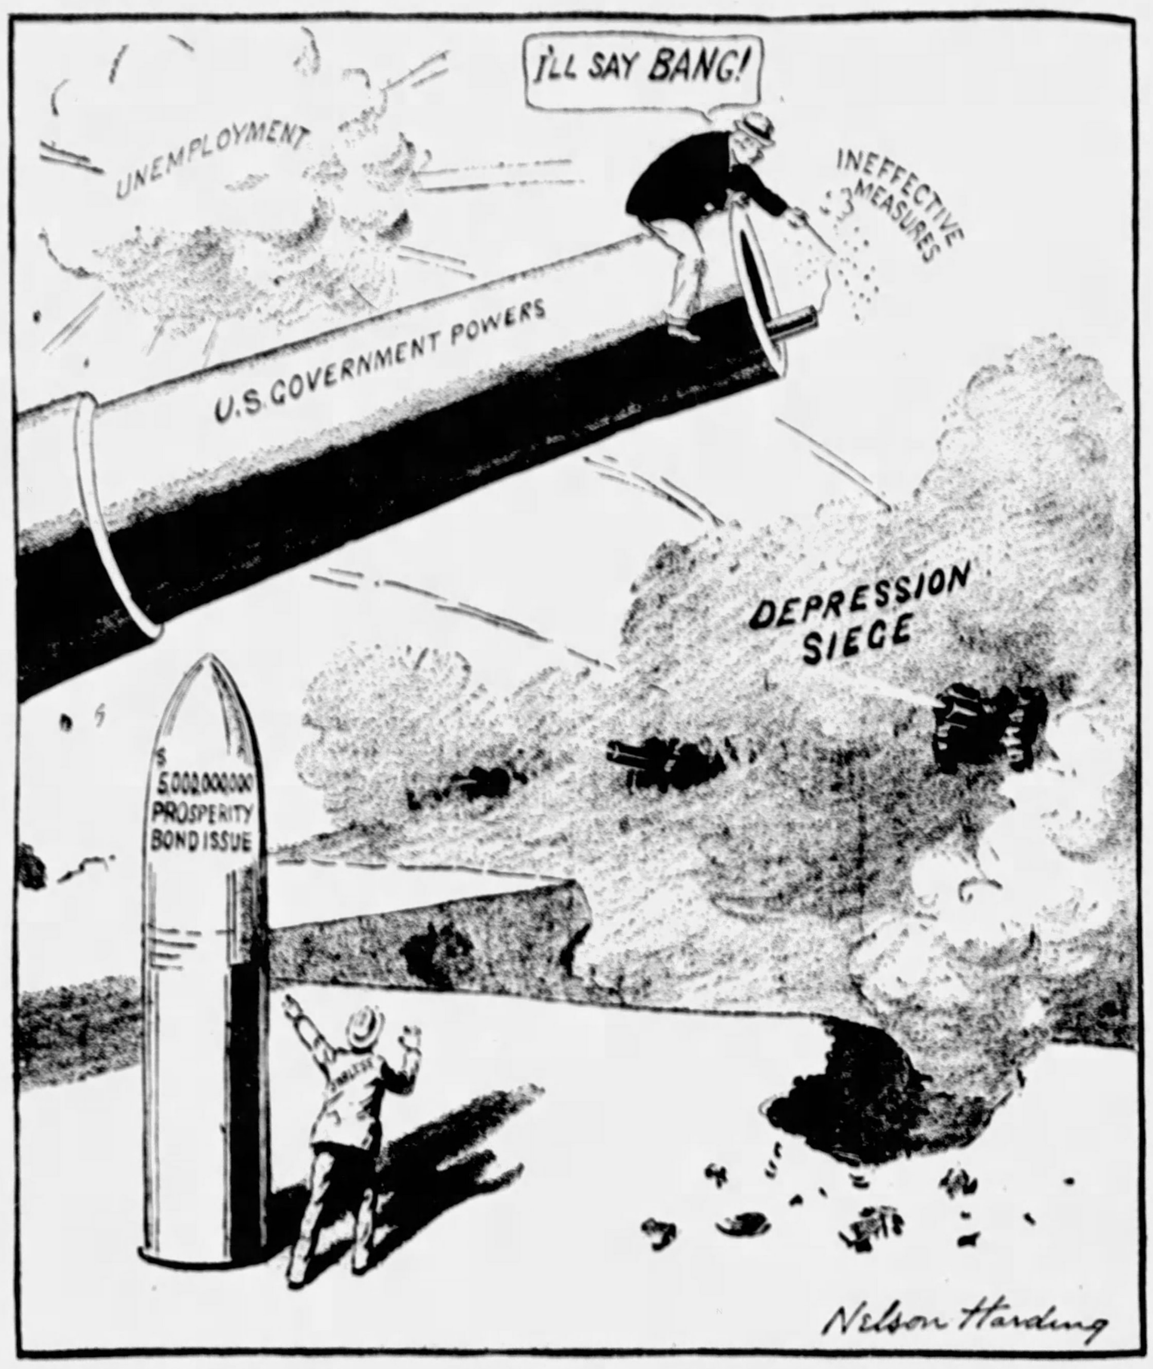
Firecrackers Or Shells? -:-

By Nelson Harding



It is a mighty cannon that
We have in our possession;
A weapon that could end the siege
If used against depression.

But cannon crackers do not make
Effective ammunition;
The big shell must be used to smash
The enemy's position.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Men Prefer 'Peaches'

The ultimate example of multum in parvo is the new Eugenie hat.

Not since the dawn of the bob and the Irene Castle cut have men shown such a vital interest in woman's HEAD. Faces have been practically OUT for years! Nobody noticed them while the skirts were short.

Legs, backs, hips, silk stockings, pajamas and bathing suits have filled the eye, the newsreels and the scandal-sheets. But woman's hat, like man's hat, has been one with the kitchen broom—something merely useful.

And NOW look at the d-ear thing! Front-page stuff! Frivolous, useless, coquettish, silly—but, oh, what a welcome symbol of woman's turn to femininity!

The first thing a woman does, when she has a change of mind, is to change her headdress to match it. That's why the men are all so delighted at the reappearance of feathers, long hair and come-hither hats. They know that it means that woman has capitulated—and decided to drop the defiant attitude. Feminism is out—and feminity is IN—and that's that!

Feminism was grand—while it lasted. But, to lots of women, it was just a gesture.

Give a woman what she wants—and she doesn't want it any more. She wants something ELSE. All this time, while women have been going Amazon, they have secretly longed to be going the other way. While they have pretended sex-antagonism, they have thought more about sex-appeal.

The Eugenie hat is a flag of truce. When a man glances at a curly head, under a pert, tip-tilted, silly, little hat, he can jolly himself with the thought that the rest of the girl is just as harmless, intriguing and feminine. It is hard to visualize a full-sized brain and a cast-iron will, working beneath a doll's hat and a come-hither feather.

* * *

Add a crop of the modish platinum-blonde hair, and you have a doll-baby effect that no man can resist. The Eugenie hat is just ANOTHER "gesture"—but a far more effective one. Men prefer women like peaches—soft and sweet on the outside, no matter how stony (or hard-boiled) they may be inside.

* * *

And isn't it NICE to see faces in vogue, again?

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up and a letter from my old companion Lloyd Scholl and a bid from Hamlin Guild to be his holiday guest in far away Tahiti, also news I was god-father to Missouri University's monthly gazette, "The Show Me." And Herb Roth came and we reminisced of early days in the city, our poverty and our piety.

In the afternoon talking on the phone to Floyd Gibbons who is in a lather about Yellowstone Park, declaring it the most engaging place in all his vast travels. And his tale of fighting a forest fire as rollicking an adventure as ever I heard.

Will and Jessie Hays, Will, Jr., and Harry Silvey to dinner and afterward to vaudeville. And saw among others Bolton Mallory, who suggests a full-sized Douglas Fairbanks, Lyn Lary and Mary Lawlor and Mary Lewis. So circling the park in the mystic, naked twinkle of the moon.

The lobby of the new Earl Carroll offers a Parisian touch and a new note in box offices. Instead of the tiny window cage with bars, three attendants in full evening dress stand at a long counter in the open to sell tickets and attend to reservations. Only whiskers are needed to make it another Folies Bergere foyer.

Incidentally, the growth of feminine smoking at the theater between acts is a phenomenon of modern life. An agile press agent recently took count at such an interval and found women smokers outnumbered men by 11. He saw but one man smoking a pipe. And he was R. M. Brinkerhoff. Many ladies light up as the final curtain is descending.

Perhaps the nearest to the Gay Ninety "evenings" that once brought out the reigning celebrities of the day are the informal dinners once or twice a week at the pent house home of the Walter Trumbulls on Central Park West. Their salon is aglow with diverse personalities on these occasions—playwrights, columnists, magazine editors, visiting arcadians, novelists, stage personalities and figures from the world of sports. The dinner is buffet and no especial effort is made to entertain. Guests are brought together and soon conversation bubbles as lively as the coffee urn. Mr. Trumbull is a sporting writer and correspondent and Mrs. Trumbull is an archaeologist of distinction.

Mr. Glass, despite his many years in America, has not shaken off his native Manchester (England) accent. His repertory offers the greatest fecundity of any story teller—next to Cobb. His comic spirit as a raconteur always flowers in sheer freaks of absurdity which inspire that spontaneous laughter that rips off vest buttons and threatens apoplexy.

Aside from Glass and Cobb, some of the notable after-dinner story tellers of the town are Charles Hanson Towne, Rupert Hughes, Bugs Baer, Harry Hershfield, E. D. Coblenz, Rube Goldberg, Al Jolson and Wilton Lackaye. Perhaps two of the greatest were the late Rennold Wolf and Harry Reichenbach.

Most professional wits had to run the gauntlet to acquire the many-splendored art of public speaking. Bugs Baer, for years, could not face the smallest audience even when composed of intimates. He blushed and stammered as did Irvin Cobb and Montague Glass. It was constant effort resulting in many agonizing moments that did the trick.

My first and last effort at forensics was at a luncheon in St. Louis nine years ago. When I stood up my mouth opened and closed like a ventriloquist's dummy, but no words came. Finally there was a despairing falsetto squeak—like a rusty gate hinge—and some startled soandso in the audience shrieked: "It's alive! Stamp on it!"

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

"What do you mean," snaps she indignantly, "by saying that the average American woman isn't a heavy thinker?"

I mean that she isn't a heavy thinker.

She's plenty else. Charming, efficient, resourceful, good-natured, adaptable, brave, generous, indomitable in getting her own way and possessed of more virility in her little finger than the average male has in his whole body.

But she ISN'T a heavy thinker.

She has little or no interest in politics. For national and international problems she gives not a hoot, save as they affect her Jim's job. She reads no serious books . . . has no serious discussions . . . is almost incapable of abstract thought.

What does she think of? Purely personal concerns. Herself. Her home. Her family. Her husband's career. Her neighbors. Clothes. Cooking. Hygiene. Gardens. Schooling. Summer vacations. Bridge parties. Automobiles. Tonsil operations. Stella's love affairs. The Jones divorce. That awful trunk murder. Diets. Corrective shoes. Wonder if I should get my hair touched up. A dinner for the Browns.

But aren't these normal interests for a busy wife and mother? But the average American woman is more than a busy wife and mother. She's a power. Because she is so efficient, so indomitable, so virile, she has more privilege and authority than any woman in history. She stamps her pattern not only on her home and her children, but also on her community and the whole nation.

IF THE CARTOONISTS REALLY TOLD THE TRUTH, THEY'D PICTURE UNCLE SAM IN BEACH PAJAMAS, WITH A VACUUM CLEANER IN ONE HAND AND A CONFESSIONS MAGAZINE IN THE OTHER.

Yes, Mamma bosses the American show. And Dad not only lets her, but likes it. So do the politicians. So does the press. Naturally it does not occur to the lady herself, that there may be any flaws in her record.

And so, while she accumulates the power of a Mussolini, MENTALLY SHE REMAINS A 13-YEAD-OLD SCHOOL GIRL . . . IGNORANT, SENTIMENTAL, INTOLERANT, SELF-SATISFIED, EMOTIONALLY UNADJUSTED, SUSPICIOUS OF ALL THINGS OUTSIDE HER NARROW RANGE OF INTERESTS . . . THE MOST DANGEROUS CITIZEN ON EARTH.

And what she is doing to this American nation is plenty! She is keeping it in rompers and feeding fruit salad. And if anyone dares rebel and state a few harsh facts, she phones the D. A. R. and has 'em declared a Communist.

But hasn't the high ideals for herself and her family? Yes, of course she has them. BUT WHAT GOOD IS AN IDEAL UNLESS IT RECOGNIZES REALITY? And of reality, the Dear little Woman knows nothing, and doesn't intend to learn.

So there she stands—the most marvelous and the most menacing factor in American life today—

And I'm one of her, dagonnit!

Isn't It So?

The Rape of Temperance

By James A. Reed

Former United States Senator from Missouri.

(Copyright, 1931, by James A. Reed.)

Published by Cosmopolitan Book Corporation (Farrar and Rinehart.)

LET me sum up the case against the advocates of prohibition. They charged that the saloon was the principal and almost exclusive source of crime, immorality and poverty, and asserted that the closing of the saloon would practically abolish these evils.

The iniquities they promised to banish have increased TENFOLD.

They have substituted for the saloon, conducted in the open under constant police surveillance, the speakeasy, the dive and the secret brothel.

They have made the illicit sale of liquor the most profitable business in the world and placed it in the hands of desperate men, willing to violate any law to gain easy riches.

THEY told us jails and penitentiaries would stand vacant. They are filled to overflowing. Human beings are herded in foul-smelling, disease-breeding cells so horrible that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals would instantly protest if brute beasts were similarly treated.

They told us the courts of criminal jurisdiction would be without occupation.

Their corridors and ante-rooms are crowded with moonshiners, dope fiends, thieves, highwaymen, robbers, murderers, interspersed among whom are people who, but for this atrocious law, would be useful and law-abiding citizens.

They told us that prohibition would prohibit.

IT HAS NOT PROHIBITED.

They told us drunkenness would decrease.

It has increased more than FOURFOLD.

They told us that the waste of human life caused by intoxicants would cease, and the energies of those who wasted their time and substance in drinking would be employed in gainful occupations.

FIRST and last, they have ravished from their homes and occupations not less than a quarter of a million men and women to be supported at the expense of the state.

Upon this army they have placed the brand of felon, but, worse than that, they have reduced to shame and frequently to misery and want more than a million innocent wives, sisters, fathers, mothers and children of the condemned.

They have imposed upon the taxpayers a direct enforcement burden of nearly FIVE HUNDRED MILLION DOLLARS.

They have caused a loss of revenue to the federal government of approximately FOUR BILLION DOLLARS, and upon the state a loss equally large.

They have recruited the criminal world from a class of people largely heretofore law-abiding, and financed it with a stream of bootleg gold.

They told us youth would no longer be tempted, and liquor would be beyond its reach.

THE legal regulations forbidding the sale of liquor to a minor are no longer effective, and liquor is in common use by millions of boys and girls.

They told us the manufacture of intoxicants would absolutely cease.

They have transferred the business of the brewery and distillery to the bypaths and creeks of the country and the cellars and garrets of the cities.

They have restored the forgotten art of home-made liquors and taught hundreds of thousands to produce intoxicants from every sugar or starch-yielding fruit and grain.

They have directly killed by poison, mostly administered and prescribed under the supervision of the prohibition department, thousands of unsuspecting people.

IN an attempt to dam up the stream of human appetite and desire they have let loose upon us a devastating flood.

They told us they did not seek to control or interfere with the personal habits or privileges of the citizen.

They now declare their intent to punish by fine and imprisonment the man who purchases, along with the seller.

They told us they sought to prohibit only liquors actually intoxicating.

They jammed through a law declaring liquors NON-INTOXICATING IN FACT, TO BE INTOXICATING IN LAW.

They have practically adopted the slogan: "The Constitution, except the Eighteenth Amendment, be damned."

They have imposed cruel and inhuman punishments.

They are now seeking to abolish trial by jury in liquor cases and advocate the use of the Army and Navy to enforce prohibition.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Speeding automobile drivers are not the only nuisance and menace on the road. The slow driver is responsible for many accidents because of the number who must pass him.

Officers should keep track of pokey, as well as speedy, drivers.

The driver who is afraid to keep up with the accepted standard of speed and the one who wants to loaf should keep off the main arteries.

He may have a right to the road but he is an hindrance to the pleasure and safety of other autoists.

Just as old age has to step aside for youth to go by, so the slow driver should expect that for his sort of driving he should seek the least frequented thoroughfares.

When traffic moves at a given maximum speed there is not much chance of accident unless something unforeseen happens.

But when traffic is held up by these slow-moving vehicles and the consequent passing it involves there are likely to be disasters.
